Twice Supreme: Maryland Holstein Named Best Of The Best At World Expo

MADISON (Wis.) — A little more than a week after taking home supreme champion honors at the All-American Dairy Show in Harrisburg, 4-year-old Holstein Tri-Day Ashlyn ET went on to be named supreme cow of all breeds at the World Dairy Expo, widely regarded as the best dairy show in the world.

Owned by Ernie Kueffner of Boonsboro, Md. and Adrienne and Kristi Crutch of Oseeana Holsteins, W.V., Ashlyn is the daughter of dam Bindy-Brook Odyssey Favorite and Marcrest Encore. She is classified EX-94 and produced 38,567 pounds of milk in 348 days as a 3-year-old.

"It's quite a thrill," Kueffner said of the cow's selection as supreme champion.

Ashlyn excels in every aspect of dairyness, including type and production, as well as being an excellent brood female. "She's a complete, complete cow," he said.

One of several offspring carrying on the legacy of Ashlyn's great genetics is her 3-month heifer calf, EK-Oseeana Ashlyn's Allure. At a $25,000 selling price, the calf topped the the World Classic Sale here last week.

As owner and proprieter of Kueffner's Holsteins and Jerseys, Kueffner originally bought his 50 percent share of Pennsylvania-born Ashlyn from Oseeana Holsteins in 1999.

Kueffner houses about 70 dairy animals on his farm, including Ashlyn. About 80 percent are Holstein and the other 20 percent are Jersey. The herd consists mainly of show animals, cows used for breeding and flushing purposes, and offspring of the "unique" cows bred there.

The business offers breeding stock and embryos for sale, some of them going to foreign countries including Switzerland, Germany, and Japan.

Three of Ashlyn's sons are being used for artificial insemination, two with Semex in Ontario and one with Select Sires in Ohio. Ashlyn also has four living daughters by embryo transfer (ET). Her second calf remains on Kueffner's farm and is now a bred heifer.

Kueffner is no newcomer to success in showing champions. In 1996 he exhibited the supreme champion Jersey at the World Dairy Expo — making him this year the first person ever to show two supreme champions at the event.

Originally from Wisconsin where he grew up milking Brown Swiss on his father's dairy farm, Kueffner continued to be involved with dairy animals after moving out of the state, pursuing other business ventures, and raising a family.

"Basically, I've been involved with cattle my whole life," he said.

It has been within the past five or six years that breeding and embryo transplanting became Kueffner's main focus. In 1997, after spending 12 years in North Carolina, he decided to make the move to Maryland to be in "one of the best states in the country for good cattle."

Kueffner said he was honored that his father, Ernie Kueffner, now 80 years old and still living in Wisconsin, was able to make it the World Dairy Expo to see him show the supreme cham-

YORK (York Co.) — On Wednesday, Gov. Mark Schweiker delivered $3.5 million in capital budget redevelopment assistance funds for a new York Expo Arena at the York Fairgrounds.

"For more than 200 years, the York Fairgrounds has served as a premiere showcase for Pennsylvania agricultural products, a center stage for educational programs and entertainment, and a key economic asset for south-central Pennsylvania," Schweiker said. "Still, the home of the oldest fair in America holds the promise of delivering even more for York and the surrounding region — and its about to get a new facility to help it succeed in fulfilling that promise.

"Today we present $3.5 million in capital budget redevelopment assistance funds to build the brand-new York Expo Arena at the York Fairgrounds. Delmarva Broiler/Fryer
ATLANTA, GA.
Report Supplied By USDA

Movement of ready-to-cook whole birds was generally noted as no better than fair with the bulk of activity centered around standing commitments. Offerings were fully adequate to ample. Live supplies were at least moderate; weights varied and were mostly in a desirable range. Processing schedules were moderate. Less than trucklot asking prices were unchanged at 55 to 69 cents. Trade sentiment was about steady at best. In the parts complex, all items were at least adequate for the typically lackluster mid-week buying interest. Breast cuts, wings and boneless skinless thighs were competitively priced in an effort to stimulate activity.

Northeast Broiler Fryer Parts Part I

ATLANTA, GA.
Report Supplied By USDA

Trucklot buying activity was mostly fair during midweek trading as dealers remained cautious and unaggressive. Offerings of breast items were available and discounting remained prevalent in an attempt to place product. Legs and leg quarters were at least sufficient. Wings and tenderloins were fully adequate. Movement through distributive channels was light to no better than fair as buyers kept floorstocks closely balanced, and retail movement lacked impetus overall. In addition, the foodservice sector was slow and disappointing as hotel, restaurant and institutional business remained subdued. The market tone was barely steady on wings and tenderloins, no better than steady on the balance.

St. Joseph, MO
October 10, 2001

Winter wheat plantings were up to 70 percent on the weekly USDA Progress report. Export sales continued slow this week for wheat.

The OLD FARMER'S ALMANAC

THIS WEEK WITH

NEW MOON, OCT. 16

A COUNTERTOP GARDEN

Parsley, sage, rosemary, and thyme are among the herbs you can bring indoors if your herb gardens are still prospering and the first autumn frost hasn't hit. You will need a deep pot to accommodate the long taproot of a parsley plant. Choose the smaller parsley plants for the best luck. Sage, marjoram, and thyme transplant easily, as does rosemary, but all will need a spot that is not too dry and is in good light. A southern exposure helps to keep the herbs from getting too leggy. Pinching off leaves for your winter stews and casseroles will help keep the plants bushy. If you keep them on a windowsill over the kitchen sink, they'll soak up humidity and you'll be reminded to use them.

O!...the powerful grace that lies in herbs...

–William Shakespeare, British playwright (1564–1616)

TIP OF THE WEEK

PEPPERED TUNA

1 tablespoon each black, white, green, and/or pink peppercorns
4 portions (4 to 6 ounces each) fresh tuna, 1 inch thick (or substitute swordfish, salmon, or maui-maui)
1 tablespoon olive oil kosher salt, to taste
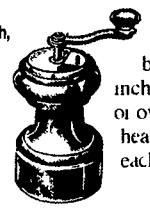
1 lemon, cut into wedges, for garnish

Crush peppercorns and mix them well. Brush fish with oil, then press the crushed peppercorns into both sides of the fish. Grill, broil, or sauté, 4 to 5 inches from the flame or over medium to high heat, for 3 minutes on each side.

Makes 4 servings.



THE OLD FARMER'S WEATHER PROVERBS

ATTENTION, GARDENERS!

The fall 2001 Gardener's Companion is on sale. You can buy it at supermarkets, bookstores, or garden centers. Or send $3.99 to The Old Farmer's Almanac, Dept. GCSU, P.O. Box 520, Dublin, NH 03444

OPINION

A Way Out

Lou Moore, well-known and respected Penn State economist, noted that the "best efforts" were under way to avoid a recession.

As of Oct. 2, there were six interest rate cuts (an eight-year low), consumer prices were low (only up 2.7 percent), unemployment stood at 4.9 percent (good historically), oil prices were stabilized and falling, the consumers kept the economy afloat, and gross domestic product was up 0.2 percent.

"We had actually avoided a recession until the events of Sept. 11," Moore noted. "Now I believe a recession is a certainty."

With the interest rate cut of Oct. 2, "the rates are the lowest in 40 years," Moore noted. "This will help spur the economy, but it will take a while. Probably not until next year will we see any growth."

With all the events since that horrifying date of 9-11, the chaotic nature of the stock market, layoffs and "ripple effect," Moore noted, even ag is affected.

For the ag economy, there has been too much grain production, keeping prices down. Though the general ag economy still seems "unmoved" by the Sept. 11 event, Moore noted, exports still remain sluggish, government supports are in question, and overall "farm income suffering," for some, continues.

Is there are a way out for agriculture? Perhaps the headway being made in establishing a Mid-Atlantic ethanol facility, or groups of facilities, could spur better corn prices. But for our increasing dependence on ag exports — this may be on hold until the war is resolved. And the resolution of this war is unclear, though it seems certain, unfortunately, more innocent lives will be lost.

Now Is The Time

By Leon Ressler

Lancaster County Extension Director

To Participate In The National Pesticide Initiative Survey

A survey of corn and apple growers is being conducted in Pennsylvania in October and November by the Pennsylvania Agricultural Statistics Service, in cooperation with Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences. The 2001 Fruit Chemical Use Survey and 2001 Agricultural Resources Management Study will survey pesticide use and pest management tactics.

According to Bill Hoffman, senior extension associate in Penn State's Pest Management Information Center, "It's important that growers cooperate because this information could help protect the tools the state's growers depend on."

Approximately 200 apple growers and 200 corn growers will receive letters telling them they have been selected for the survey. Survey personnel will call to set up a time to visit the farm or residence to conduct the interview.

"Typically, the interview lasts an hour," Hoffman said. "Producers should have their seed, fertilizer, and/or pesticide records near at hand so the interview goes quickly and smoothly." He emphasizes that all information from individual growers will remain confidential. "Also, for the first time, growers will receive one core pesticide credit for responding to the survey," he said.

The USDA and the Environmental Protection Agency will include survey data in a national database of information on how agricultural chemicals are used, as well as the quantities used for specific crops.

"The Food Quality Protection Act of 1996 instituted much higher food safety standards related to pesticide residue," Hoffman said. "Without good data, the EPA may assume farmers use more pesticides than they actually do. This could lead to pesticides being banned or restricted unnecessarily." Hoffman also points out that information on usage patterns often influences manufacturers' decisions to submit a product for reregistration and approval with regulatory agencies.

State and national estimates of agricultural chemical use by the surveyed groups will be published in mid-2002.

To Harvest Frost-Damaged Corn And Soybeans

With the hard freeze this week, you may have some immature corn or soybeans that were damaged.

According to Bob Anderson, Lancaster County agronomy agent, corn reaches maturity when the black layer is formed at the base of the kernel. In soybeans, maturity is reached when the bean pods are no longer green. At maturity, corn is roughly 35 percent moisture and beans are between 18 and 20 percent moisture. At maturity, neither crop will accumulate any more dry matter. Frost before maturity will reduce both quality and yields.

Frost-damaged corn will have small and misshapen soft kernels. The incomplete development of the starch structure will cause a pithy kernel resulting in a high percent of kernel break during handling and low-test weight (below 45 pounds per bushel). It will also result in low protein levels and low digestibility amino acid levels will be very variable.

Managing frosted corn appropriately can help reduce yield losses and maintain the feeding value. But if the grain has already dried to or below 35 percent moisture, losses will be negligible even following a severe frost. If any green leaves remain after a frost, even leaves that are below the ear, the corn plant will continue live and mature and will increase in dry matter content. A good rule of thumb to remember — let frosted corn stand as long as there are green leaves and the ear has not formed the black layer.

The best use of frosted corn is animal feed. However, it should be tested so that the feeding program can be supplemented with additional protein and amino acids. In addition, fungi can present a problem with frosted corn, so continue checking for fungi during storage. Expect storage time to be reduced by as much as 50 percent with frosted corn.

Frost-damaged soybeans will show green or elongated yellow beans that shrink to smaller than normal size after drying. Immature beans are difficult to extract oil from and the oil content is reduced.

The best use of frosted soybeans is also for livestock feed. Processors will discount for green soybeans because the green color must be refined out of the oil. Oil from immature beans often contains high levels of free fatty acids, which cause rancidity. Meal from immature beans will contain more residual oil than the normal 0.5 to 1.0 percent. Direct marketing from the field of frosted beans usually result in the highest discount for green beans. Cleaning and proper drying may improve the marketability of these beans.

THE LIMITS OF NEIGHBORLINESS

Background Scripture:
Luke 10:25-37.
Devotional Reading:
Deuteronomy 15:7-11.

"And behold, a lawyer stood up to question him . . ."

It is significant that this question was posed by someone who approached "eternal life" from a legalistic standpoint. "Teacher, what shall I do to inherit eternal life?" It is a straightforward question, and Jesus gives him a straightforward question in return: "What is written in the law? How do you read?"

The lawyer's answer should have been understood even by nonlegal minds: "You shall love the Lord your God with all your heart, soul, strength, and mind; and your neighbor as yourself." And Jesus answered: "You have answered right; do this, and you will live." That could have been the end of it, but it wasn't.

"But he, desiring to justify himself, said to Jesus 'And who is my neighbor?'" Jesus could have replied, "What part of 'neighbor' don't you understand?", but the problem was not that the lawyer didn't understand, but that he desired "to justify himself." "Justify" is a legal term and it helps us to realize that this man wanted to prove his right to eternal life. In order to do that, he set out to limit his responsibility by trying to get a narrow definition of "neighbor."

What's The Limit?

Setting narrow limits to our responsibilities as Christians is a normal human reaction. The disciples also asked Jesus to set limits on forgiveness: "Lord, how often shall my brother sin against me, and I forgive him? As many as seven times?" (Mt.18:21,22). A legalist would have interpreted Jesus' answer as setting a limit of 490 times or "seventy times seven." Jesus does not set a limit, but expands it indefinitely. In his parable, he similarly refuses to set limits. The grace of God, which we are called to emulate, sets no limits.

Think of some of the limits we may hold on to. A priest and a Levite passed by and they did not respond to the victim. Their compassion was limited to specific times and places and this was not one of them. Don't condemn them too quickly: their reaction was the popular one. Helping a victim is often taboo in our world today.

"Not getting involved" is a popular limit now, just as it was then.

Other limits are the ethnic and religious identity of the next person along on this road: a Samaritan. Just as the Jew disdained being in contact with Samaritans, so it was expected that a Samaritan would have nothing to do with a Jew. But, in this case, the man acted not like a Samaritan, but as a child of God, a neighbor. (If it would help, instead of "Samaritan" read "atheist," "Moslem," "Hindu," or "Hari Krishna.")

A Couple Went Down To Waco

I have previously told this story here, but I will tell it again, because, like a parable, it has a timely point.

A couple — friends of ours — was driving from Dallas to Waco, and on the way their car had a blowout. The husband was physically incapacitated and the woman did not know how to change a tire. As they were pondering this, a car stopped just ahead of theirs. Their momentary relief dissolved when the occupants of the car, two bearded, unkempt young men, got out and started walking toward them. These men certainly were not within the limits wherein they would expect or even look for help.

To the couple's surprise, however, the two young men changed their tire and, when offered "something for your trouble," smiled and refused before driving away. "Would I have stopped and helped them?" the wife asked herself. The answer, she knew, was certainly "no, never."

After all, there are "reasonable" limits, aren't there?. But Jesus made it very clear, both for the lawyer and for us, that there are no limits to neighborliness, because God himself sends his rain upon our just and unjust neighbors (Mt. 5:45).

Weekly Dairy Market Outlook

Ken Bailey
Penn State

Oct. 4, 2001

Cheese Prices Weakening

- Blocks and barrels down at the CME.
- CME butter weakens.
- Dairy production down in August.

The impact of increased butter imports and weaker dairy product sales because of a slowing economy are having an impact on butter and cheese prices at the Chicago Mercantile Exchange this week.

Grade AA butter prices settled at $1.70 per pound on Wednesday, Oct. 3, down from $1.90 per pound last Monday, Sept. 24. And both blocks and barrels closed lower at the Chicago Mercantile Exchange this week.

As of Thursday, Oct. 4, barrels were $1.55 per pound and blocks were $1.57 per pound. This was down from $1.67 per pound for barrels and $1.71 for blocks on Monday, Sept. 24.

USDA's Dairy Product Production report was released today. As expected, butter production in August was 76.5 million pounds, down 8.5 percent relative to a year ago. Hot and humid weather in August depressed butterfat production and milk volume. As a result, less cream was available for processing. American cheese production in August was higher than expected at 286.8 million pounds, down just 1.7 percent. This was in line with the drop in U.S. milk production in August. Mozzarella cheese production was down 2.4 percent, and total cheese production was down 2.9 percent.

Reduced levels of butter and cheese production would normally result in strong commodity prices. However, weaker demand for dairy products this quarter must be occurring. Butter and cheese buyers in Chicago are likely anticipating softer demand and are therefore trimming their purchases.

The lower cash cheese prices have weighted on the Class III futures at the Chicago Mercantile Exchange. As of Oct. 4, the market expects the September Class III price to be $15.89 per CWT. October Class III futures were $14.43 per CWT, well below the $15.40 level a few weeks ago. And Class III prices are expected to fall to $11.90 by December. This represents a significant reduction from a month ago.

Looking into 2002, Class III prices are expected to remain above $11.50 per CWT through the spring. This is surprising given the outlook for more milk and weaker demand. Despite a limitation on dairy replacements, the milk supply could still grow in 2002 if yield per cow recovers. And the most optimistic forecasts for the U.S. economy expect no recovery until the third quarter of 2002. Recall that the Class III price averaged $9.74 per CWT in 2000. So the outlook for Class III prices for 2002 looks pretty good.

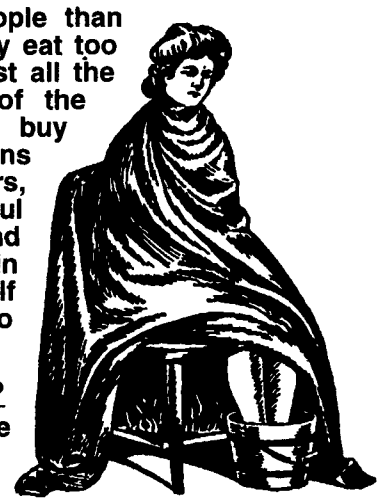
Why Be Sick And Tired?



America has more sick people than most countries, because they eat too much cooked food which lost all the enzymes and up to 80% of the nutrition. Most food you buy contains harmful toxins because they use weed killers, insecticides and many harmful chemicals in growing it, and then more chemicals in processing to increase shelf life. But there is a solution to the problem.

Be Healthy And Energetic?

May doctors and people are now using a new and safer way to remove toxins and poisons from the body, clean out the arteries and develop a strong immune system so it can fight off diseases with amazing results, without any drugs. This program supplies the immune system with killer cells, memory and suppresser cells activity and training, which is like manpower and equipment to any army. It provides the immune system with all natural, organically grown fruit, grain and vegetables" which is like good food and ammunition to an army.

Over 40 million dollars were spent in research, and over 3000 sheets of scientific documented studies by doctors supports many positive clinical experiences, and backs up the patented process in providing proven products. The cost is considerable less than drugs, chelation, radiation, chemotherapy and operations. It does NOT interfere with medication. There are now viruses that can not be stopped with antibiotics, but these all natural products are producing excellent results with supervision from doctors.

Over 3000 Doctors Have Already Switched

They have switched from drugs to alternative medicine in order to help people recover from cancer, heart attacks, arthritis diabetes, lupus, fibromyalgia, allergies, fatigue and many other health problems without any side effects. We make no health claims. We work with doctors in giving the body all natural food grade products it needs to heal itself. There is also a Prevention Program to help you from getting sick. "An ounce of prevention costs far less, and is so much better than a pound of cure" (doctor and hospital bills). Which would you prefer, $149 a year to help prevent a heart attack, or a $50,000 by pass operation? The choice is yours. Let us try to help you prevent health problems.

PRICES OF CONDENSED SKIM, DOLLARS PER LB. WET SOLIDS, F.O.B PRODUCING PLANTS: Northeast Class II, includes monthly formula prices: 1.0700-1 1100; Class III - spot prices - 1 0000-1.1800

SPOT SHIPMENTS OF GRADE A MILK INTO FLORIDA AND OTHER SOUTHEASTERN STATES FLORIDA: THIS WEEK 96, LAST WEEK 59, LAST YEAR 102. SOUTHEAST STATES. THIS WEEK 127, LAST WEEK 127; LAST YEAR 99.

Milk production is easing higher in most sections of the East. Fat and protein levels in the incoming milk are increasing and getting back to "normal" levels. The first "killing frost" hit most of the region from the Middle Atlantic area north Silage and grain harvests are in full swing. Fluid milk supplies are long and manufacturing plants are often operating on increased schedules. Surplus milk volumes in the Southeast remain light and plant schedules are often limited to weekend operations. Bottled milk sales are fair to good. Some retail features on low fat milk are in progress. Unfortunately, this does create more cream to clear at a time when cream is burdensome. Milk shipments into Florida jumped this week. Reports indicate that milk production is little changed and demand has improved. The need for milk in the other Southeastern states is unchanged from last week and milk import figures are steady

The condensed skim market is generally unchanged. However, following the down turn in the CME cash markets for butter and cheese, many suppliers have lowered their estimate for October Class III skim and have adjusted their Class III condensed skim price However, this week's price range is unchanged. The Class II condensed skim prices are about steady Demand is a little better now that prices are easing lower, but NDM is still available at less than a $1.00 per pound.

The fluid cream market remains weak Offerings are burdensome and demand is only occasionally improved Butter makers continue to receive offers to sell and many are taking advantage of this surge in offerings The paying prices are "all over the board" and ranging from flat market to 115 delivered date of delivery Some new interest from cream cheese makers has been noted since the CME price for butter did not change on October 8. Other buyers are waiting to see what changes, if any, will take place at the CME on the tenth and/or twelfth before placing more orders. Ice cream production is slow to fair Some operations were down over the Columbus Day holiday weekend and were getting back on line at midweek Churning activity is moderate to heavy and some local producers are being selective about the volumes of cream they purchase Most do not want too much uncommitted butter in their coolers/freezers

Clean, fresh, quality drinking water on your farm could make a bigger difference than you think.

National Feeder Cattle Weekly Summary

St. Joseph, Mo.
Report Supplied By USDA

NATIONAL FEEDER CATTLE SUMMARY - Week ending Oct. 5, 2001. Receipts: This week 190,800; last week 202,100; year ago 203,400. Trading of feeder cattle has not been easy on producers the past three weeks as the market has moved sharply lower The decline has been faster than most can remember. According to USDA's Livestock and Grain Market News Service, feeder cattle and calves moved mostly 2.00 to 4.00 lower from the Northwest to the Southeast, except for some trends being reported in the High Plains of weak to 2.00 lower. Some firmness could be seen toward the end of the week as higher futures lended support. Much of the softness is due to farmers being in the fields either planting wheat or running the combine. One knows that once the fire is built in the engine, a farmer will not stop until all is done. Those running the combines do not want to be bothered with doctoring calves when they should be in the field. Those buying right now may be getting the bargains if the cattle are not carrying any excess condition. Weaned and vaccinated calves are the type being sought after right now as the warm days and cold nights can wreak havoc on a calf's immune system Cooler temperatures are being forecasted for much of the country this weekend, with warmer weather behind the cold front that will bring in Mr. Jack Frost in some areas. Country feeder cattle trading is not offering any support as numbers continue to be light. Early in the week, feeder cattle prices were following the anticipated demise of the fed cattle trade as some fats were traded steady to 1.00 lower early. However, support from the futures spurred a 1.00 to 2.00 higher trade late in the week The feeders that were pessimistic and did not stick to their guns are kicking themselves for giving in too soon this week. Showlists will get lighter as the heavies get moved out of the lots. Futures have rebounded to close Friday limit up above 69 00 Look for retailers to get out there and buy product as the live product is moving higher It seems that the feeders have turned the corner and are looking to greener pastures. This week's reported feeder supply included 31 percent over 600 lbs

Dairy Beef, Market Beef Compete At Manheim Farm Show

MICHELLE KUNJAPPU
Lancaster Farming Staff

MANHEIM (Lancaster Co.) — Both dairy beef and market beef animals took the spotlight in Manheim Farm Show's Arena on Wednesday afternoon.

The first event, the dairy beef show, "was a good show. I think the kids learned a lot," said Cheryl Fairbairn, judge.

There was a wide range of experience among the exhibitors. "There were some really good showmen in the ring," said Fairbairn. In addition, "we did a lot with the showmanship," she said. "I gave the exhibitors a lot of pointers, since many exhibitors had never shown before."

Twenty-seven competitors brought dairy beef animals into the ring during the afternoon event.

Cody Musser, 19, a junior at Manheim Central High School, and "Max" got the nod from Fairbairn for grand champion dairy beef honors.

Musser, an FFA participant, has learned the ins and outs of showing dairy beef from a neighbor and other competitors, he said.

Additionally Cody has shown hogs for the third year this fair season, and had four to exhibit at Manheim Farm Show.

He is the son of Jim and Sue Musser, operators of a family farm and grain business. The Mussers own 70 acres and rent 250 for crops, plus custom feed 150 steers at once.

Next year, said Cody, he plans to be back in the beef show ring, either with a dairy beef or market steer animal.

The calf came from Ken Zurin, a dairy producer in Lancaster County.

A freshman at Manheim Central High School who lives a mile away from Cody Musser, Adam Zurin took "Buzz" to reserve champion placing in the dairy beef show. The calf, Adam's only dairy beef project, is also from Ken Zurin, a relative of Adam's.

This is his third year of showing dairy beef, and he plans to be back next year. He enjoys showing the animals because they are easier than steers to fit and also easier to take care of. "They have better attitudes because we've had them since they wee small, and they're not out on pasture," said Adam.

He is the son of Gary and Judy Zurin. His father has been the leader of the Lancaster County 4-H Dairy Club since its inception three years ago. Adam also showed two steers and two lambs at Manheim Show, and plans to sell one of each at Friday evening's auction. The remaining steer will travel to compete at the upcoming Farm Show, and he plans to keep the other lamb for breeding purposes.

In the beef show, Adam took home a first in the 4-H preview show and a champion showman placing.

In the beef show, Ryan Donough, Manheim, won overall grand champion placing and the revolving Walter E. Hiestand trophy and premium. With Donough are Dorothy Hiestand and Diana Lynn Orley.

Market Beef Show

"Adequate finish" marked the market beef show, according to Fairbairn.

"This show is late enough in fair season that the steers are really finished," said Fairbairn.

Ryan Donough, Manheim, won the light heavyweight division in 4-H before getting the nod from Fairbairn for overall grand champion placing. "This steer has more length of body," said Fairbairn. "Both champion and reserve had adequate finish."

Ryan received the Walter Hiestand Memorial Trophy and premium for his placing.

Chris Hess, Mount Joy, had reserve champion in the FFA division. Ryan's sister, Joelynn, won reserve placing in the 4-H show.

Ryan's steer, "Cletus," will be sold at Friday evening's auction. The steer was from a club calf producer in Crawford County.

"Quervo," another of Ryan's steers, was part of the Farm Show preview show at the fair, and will travel to Harrisburg to compete in January.

He is the son of Ed and LaRue Donough, owners of "TRJ Acres" in Manheim.

The three-acre farm houses 50 breeding ewes and market lambs, besides show steers and hogs.

Overall reserve champion winner Brandon Forry, 19, has four years of experience in the show ring with cattle and 10 years of experience showing hogs. Manheim Farm Show is the only show that he exhibits animals.

Brandon Forry, Manheim, took home reserve champion honors. He is joined by Cheryl Fairbairn, judge, and Manheim Farm Show Queen Trina Plaskowski.

What's next for Ashlyn? After all her success in Maryland, Pennsylvania, and Wisconsin, Kueffner said he's debating whether or not to take her to the biggest dairy show in Canada later in the year.

He is also in the process of deciding whether or not to harvest Ashlyn's embryos or let her calve for the next lactation. Flushing for a potential harvest of 75 to 100 embryos creates its own kind of stress on the animal, he said.

Ag Leaders Watch Farm Bill Developments

Agriculture Russell Redding told a group of ag leaders here Thursday.

While acknowledging the "ingenuity of Pennsylvania agriculture" through diversity, a strong livestock sector, and direct marketing creativity, Redding urged producers to take advantage of timely assistance, especially in the area of risk management through the state crop insurance program, recently extended for crop year 2002.

Redding spent about an hour briefing the group on ag policy developments, including possible implications of the 2002 Farm Bill being hammered out in Washington.

In a 291 to 120 vote with strong support from both parties, the U.S. House last week passed a farm bill version that would mandate $170 billion for the nation's agriculture over 10 years.

Opposed to increased spending in the bill and citing the need to focus on national security and recovery after the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks, President Bush's Office of Management and Budget two days before the vote urged the House in a statement to defer action on the bill which would "increase federal spending by more than $70 billion over the next 10 years."

"In the context of the current state of the nation, consideration of large new financial commitments that do not require immediate action are not timely," the statement continued.

House Ag Committee Chairman Larry Combest, however, has pointed out that the House's bill is as "important to national security as anything," Redding said.

4-H Dairy Judges Shine At Expo

DAVE LEFEVER

MADISON, Wis. — Pennsylvania youth dairy judges made a strong appearance, competing with talent from across the country at the 35th World Dairy Expo here last week.

More than 60,000 visitors attended the annual dairy extravaganza.

York countian Raechel Kilgore, a member of the Pennsylvania 4-H dairy cattle judging team, took home top individual honors in the National 4-H Dairy Cattle Judging Contest. Kilgore was also second place individual in the reason category.

Coached by Paul Knight, the Pennsylvania team took first place in the reason category and fourth place overall, with Amy Kulick of Cumberland County emerging as top individual in reasons.

Knight, of Airville in York County, has been coaching the 4-H team at the World Dairy Expo for the past four years. In fact, his 1998 team captured the same placings as the team this year. However, this year marked a new level of individual achievement for the team.

Knight said he has been judging dairy cattle ever since he was a boy growing up on a York County dairy farm.

"Those were the best of times," Knight said of his opportunities as a kid to be judging the animals.

Knight commended the four-member team of Kilgore, Kulick, Katie Harwick of Lehigh County, and Jacob Hushon of York County.

"They were all such a wonderful bunch of kids," he said.

Knight has worked with Kilgore and Hushon "since they were about 8 years old" and began coaching the entire team when it was formed about two months ago, he said.

He is employed by Select Sires while continuing to help manage a 220-cow Holstein herd with his two brothers near Airville.

Additional achievements include Hushon placing eighth in individual reasons. In another project at the expo, he also exhibited the junior champion Brown Swiss in the open and youth shows. In the Guernsey judging contest, the Pennsylvania team also won first place overall.

Gov. Schweiker Delivers $3.5 Million For York Expo Arena

"Combined with our recent ribbon-cutting on the Farm Show renovations and Expo Center in Harrisburg, I'd say Pennsylvania agriculture is enjoying a bumper crop of rebuilding!"

The fairgrounds is presently a 120-acre complex consisting of 20 structures and parking for 5,000 cars. The new $13 million arena will be located where ten 80-year-old livestock barns stand. The barns will be demolished to make way for the new arena, a 90,000-square-foot center for agricultural, convention, and exposition events.

The new arena will include up to 6,500 seats (retractable seating for 4,000 visitors and floor-seating for another 2,500), heat and air-conditioning, and state-of-the-art multimedia wiring and hook-ups.

Construction is planned to begin the day after the York Fair closes in September 2002, and is expected to be completed prior to the opening of the fair in September 2003.

Before that time, construction on the Farm Show Complex in Harrisburg is scheduled to have been completed. Dennis Grumbine, Farm Show director, noted that additional shows can be brought to Pennsylvania with this new York Expo construction. Farm Show itself will continue to remain the premier agricultural event, even if additional ag-related shows are scheduled the same week as Farm Show.

Show places and times can be competitive. "Competition has made our society great," Grumbine told Lancaster Farming on Thursday. "We welcome all of it."

Grumbine noted that ag commodity organizations represented at Farm Show have agreed to continue their work at the January state event, and commitment by ag organizations to Farm Show remains strong.

At the event this week in York, Gov. Schweiker was joined by Department of Agriculture Secretary Sam Hayes; Sen. Michael Waugh (R-York); Mike Rutter, president, York Fair board; and 4-H and FFA members.

"I am very excited about this new investment Gov. Schweiker has delivered for York County's agriculture industry," Sen. Michael Waugh (R-York) said. "The new York Expo Arena at the York Fairgrounds, a state-of-the-art venue for agriculturalists and visitors of all ages, will bring tremendous benefits to York County's economy."

Mike Rutter, president of the York Fair Board, said, "The benefits of the new York Expo Arena will reach beyond the fairgrounds and even well beyond York. More events at the York Fairgrounds will mean more reservations at Pennsylvania lodging facilities, more meals at the region's restaurants, and more visits to other nearby cultural, historical, and natural tourist attractions."

The York County Agricultural Society, a nonprofit organization, operates the York Fair. Established in 1765, the York Fair is America's oldest fair and York County's largest entertainment event, attracting more than 700,000 people during its 10-day run in 2000. The York Fairgrounds hosts more than 180 events annually.

Last month, Gov. Schweiker led a groundbreaking ceremony for a new Exposition Center at the Farm Show Complex in Harrisburg. The groundbreaking marked the start of a $76 million renovation and expansion project at the complex.

In August 2000, Gov. Ridge announced the largest-ever state investment in Pennsylvania agriculture — about $90 million — to help the state's farm families and agribusinesses compete and thrive in the 21st century. This commitment included $66 million to expand and refurbish the Farm Show complex, about $24 million for a new Livestock Evaluation Center in Centre County, and a new Teaching and Research Center at the University of Pennsylvania's School of Veterinary Medicine in Philadelphia.

With Wednesday's announcement, the Ridge-Schweiker Administration's capital investment in southcentral Pennsylvania's arts, culture, and history has grown to about $139 million for projects such as the Pennsylvania National Sports Hall of Fame, Strand-Capitol Performing Arts Center, Pennsylvania Railroad Museum, Whitaker Center for Science and the Arts, the State Farm Show Complex, Harrisburg Civil War Museum, Hershey Arena, Ephrata Cloister, Landis Valley Museum, and Cornwall Iron Furnace.

State funding for Wednesday's announcement was enabled in February 1999 when the General Assembly approved Gov. Tom Ridge's plan to raise the cap on the capital budget's redevelopment assistance fund by $650 million for vital community and economic development projects statewide.

The Redevelopment Assistance Capital Program is a state grant program for the acquisition and construction of economic, cultural, or civic improvement projects. The General Assembly must authorize funding for projects before they can be considered by the governor. Since 1985, more than $1.6 billion in redevelopment-assistance funds have helped to leverage more than $4.1 billion in local matching funds. Projects range from museums, zoos, theaters and cultural centers to airports, convention centers and industrial parks.

Agriculture is Pennsylvania's No. 1 industry, employing more than 800,000 people and contributing $44 billion annually to the state's economy.

His steer, "Tank," an Angus crossbred, was one of a load of 120 cattle from West Virginia that were purchased for the family farm's feedlot.

An FFA participant, Brandon plans to be back in the ring next year with steers and hogs. He credits his show ring experience to Mrs. Heistand, who "has been an encouragement for years," in exhibiting animals.

He is the son of Gary and Lynne Forry, Manheim, owners of "Pleasant View Farms," a 300-acre beef cattle , broiler, and layer operation. The family finishes 800-1,000 head of cattle per year.

Besides helping out at home, Brandon works full-time at a turf producing business and plans to begin truck driving in the near future.

Cheryl Fairbairn, a livestock extension agent from Chester County, judges several shows a year in the Pennsylvania area. She and her family own 75 Angus brood cows in Coatesville. Additionally she has coached the livestock club for many years and has served as an extension agent for 22 years.

KILE Hosts American British White Parks

MICHELLE KUNJAPPU
Lancaster Farming Staff

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — A distinctively-colored breed was in the Farm Show complex's small arena Monday morning to finish KILE's cattle shows.

Seventeen head of White Park cattle from seven exhibitors were shown. Competitors came from Indiana, Tennessee, and New York, besides Pennsylvania, to exhibit their animals.

Robert and Nancy Wilburn own the champion bull, "Wilburns Full Blood," a homebred spring yearling. The couple also took home premier breeder and premier exhibitors honors.

Matthew Brown, Myerstown, and "LPJ Jackpot" won reserve champion bull placing.

In the heifer show, Robert and Nancy Wilburn's "Wilburns Daisy" took home champion heifer honors. Wenger Farms, Myerstown, won reserve champion heifer placing with "Mytown Katie."

The Wilburns, Rochester, Indiana, have 120 head of White Park cattle on their 150-acre farm. They have had the breed for 10 years. "We wanted something gentle," said Nancy, who said that she "fell in love with" calves from a friend's herd, which led to the couple's current cow/calf breeding herd and freezer beef business. They also market club calves.

"There aren't a lot of breed shows for White Park cattle," said Nancy. The couple travels to the World Beef Expo in Madison, Wis., a breed show in Quincy, Ill., and plan to compete in an open show at North American International Livestock Exposition (NAILE) in Louisville, Ky., besides KILE.

Kevin Jensen, Courtland, Kan., judged the White Park show in addition to the Hereford show at KILE.

Jensen grew up in the beef industry and competed on a livestock judging team during his years attending a junior college. Jensen estimates that he has judged cattle shows of all breeds in half of the United States. He has also judged in Canada.

He is not aware of a herd of White Park in Kansas, and judging White Park cattle is new territory for him. KILE was the first show Jensen has judged in Pennsylvania, although he has shown Polled Herefords in the state.

Both of the champions, said Jensen, had the "phenotypic look" that he was watching for in the winners. "To look at, the champions were superior in how they were made," he said.

However Jensen believes that the cattle look like they are soundly-structured, are moderate, and "look like a maternal breed." He awarded champion honors to the cattle that were structurally sound, had good feet, and moved easily. "They look like they would complement Continental cattle that are used for pure performance," he said. "Like you could turn then out on pasture and they would take care of the calves." Penn State Cooperative Extension Capitol Region Dairy Team

AN OUNCE OF PREVENTION

Dr. Arlen Mills
Extension Veterinarian
Capitol Region

Dr. Arlen Mills

Ask yourself, "Is it more profitable to prevent a disease or to treat it?" I think we all would agree that an ounce of prevention is worth the proverbial pound of cure. And that is precisely what "biosecurity" is all about — disease prevention.

Often when we think of biosecurity, we think of confined areas, disinfectant solutions, disposable clothing, and more. These all may have a part in biosecurity in some way, but is this what biosecurity has to be on your farm? Probably not. So how do you know what you should be doing? Let's do some planning.

To keep things simple, let us first look at what we want to protect. Of all the animals on a dairy farm, which groups or individuals are at greatest risk for disease? The answer is that the calves and fresh cows are probably most vulnerable. So this may be the place to start.

Next, consider what disease may be potential threats to these livestock groups. With calves this may be a viral disease such as BVD or IBR. Now I need to think of logical ways that I may prevent these diseases from infecting those calves. Good quality colostrum may be one way, and this would require a cow vaccination program to provide this colostrum. So vaccination is one part of a biosecurity program. And the calf needs to receive the proper amount of colostrum in the right time frame to be effective. For the Holstein calf, I recommend feeding two quarts of colostrum within two hours of birth and two more quarts within eight hours. Thus colostrum management is another part of biosecurity.

Another step in disease prevention may be aimed at limiting or preventing exposure to infections. This may involve exposure from animals, people, or vehicles coming onto the farm or from another animal group already on the farm. Again, consider carefully what disease agents may pose a risk to your farm or animal group and how it may be spread.

Using BVD as an example, BVD could be brought onto the farm by animals entering the herd or perhaps a show heifer returning to the farm from a show. A BVD outbreak can be prevented by making sure all stock are properly vaccinated, herd additions have been tested and found negative for BVD, and that all stock coming onto the farm are isolated from the herd for two to three weeks. These same principles may apply to other disease agents as well.

Johnes' disease and Salmonella infections are two bacterial diseases which are commonly spread though manure. But remember that Johnes is primarily infective to the young calf while Salmonella can infect both the susceptible calf and the cow.

Remember that the fresh cow is particularly susceptible because the stress of calving has depressed her immune system. So plan farm traffic to avoid tracking manure from other areas of the farm to the fresh-cow and calf area. And how about restricting outside traffic such as livestock haulers from these two critical areas? Plan a way that bull calves and cows to be culled can be picked up from a location outside the areas where the animals most susceptible to infections are housed.

Feed, feed equipment, and feed personnel may be another way to either bring disease onto a farm or to spread it about on a farm. Arrange to have feed supplies delivered to noncritical areas from where it may then be distributed. Be sure that sick animals, either cows or calves, are fed last and that feed or feed equipment does not go from the hospital area to the other parts of the farm. There may be benefit in placing a "bootwash" in the area so that it can be used before leaving the hospital area. But these must be used and maintained properly. This subject will be addressed in a future column.

As you can now imagine, each farm may have its own biosecurity needs and challenges. But it all starts with three simple questions:

1. What are the part or parts of my farm that should be my biosecurity priority?
2. What disease or diseases should I be concerned about?
3. How are these diseases spread and how are they best controlled?

Milk Premiums, Pooling, Dairy Compact Under Spotlight In Pa.

DAVE LEFEVER
Lancaster Farming Staff

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — The Pennsylvania Milk Marketing Board (PMMB) heard testimony Oct. 3 from dairy industry representatives asking that the over-order premium paid to Pennsylvania milk producers be increased to a total of $1.65 per hundredweight.

The over-order premium is established by the PMMB in response to various weather and market conditions for Class I (beverage) milk. It is currently set at $1.35 per hundredweight above the price mandated by the federal government (federal order).

The board had voted in June to decrease the premium from $1.65 to $1.35 in response to testimony from some dairy representatives who had indicated improved conditions for dairy producers at that time.

At last week's hearing, Ed Gallagher of Dairy Marketing Services (DMS), along with representatives from Suiza Foods and the Pennsylvania State Grange, requested that the premium return to $1.65 per hundredweight through December.

The PMMB scheduled an Oct. 12 meeting to vote on the issue. Results of the vote were released after Lancaster Farming went to press this week.

Meanwhile, the Pennsylvania House and Senate Agriculture and Rural Affairs Committees are considering a new PMMB proposal on how over-order milk premiums are distributed among Pennsylvania dairy producers.

The over-order premium is paid only on Class I milk that is produced, processed, and sold in Pennsylvania. The amount of premium that any given Pa. dairy producer receives depends on the percentage of their dealer's milk sales within Pennsylvania that qualify as Class I.

Consequently, producers shipping milk to dealers who sell relatively low percentages of Class I milk to Pennsylvania markets will receive less of a premium on their milk than producers shipping to dealers with a higher percentage of Pennsylvania Class I sales.

In February of this year, the PMMB voted 2-1 to distribute or "pool" 45 percent of the over-order premium among all dairy producers in the state. The decision came in response to petitions made in 1998 by Land O' Lakes Inc., the Pennsylvania Farm Bureau (PFB) and other groups.

The PFB and several dairy cooperatives, including Land O' Lakes, have petitioned for 90 to 100 percent pooling of the over-order premium, while other groups, including the Pa. Association of Milk Dealers, the Pa. State Grange, and other dairy cooperatives have asked for zero pooling.

Legislative review is required before the new policy can be enacted by the PMMB, including review by the Agriculture and Rural Affairs Committees.

Public comment on the pooling issue will close on Oct. 22. Comments can be sent to Sharon Grottola, chief counsel of the PMMB.

In related news, existing federal provisions for the Northeast Interstate Dairy Compact as well as for creation of a new southern interstate compact have expired as of Sept. 30.

Among groups supporting dairy compact legislation is the Pennsylvania Farm Bureau (PFB).

In a Sept. 28 statement, PFB President Guy Donaldson urged Congress to either allow a vote to include dairy compact legislation in the Farm Bill currently under debate or provide stand-alone legislation.

Dr. John H. Schwartz Foundation Begins

ANDY ANDREWS
Editor

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — PennAg Industries has announced its intent to administer the Dr. John H. Schwartz Memorial Foundation, with funds generated to be awarded each year to local students pursuing an agricultural degree.

The Poultry Council of PennAg Industries, headed by Jim Shirk, has offered to administer the Foundation, it was announced Monday at the Poultry Management and Health Seminar at Kreider's Restaurant.

A board will meet annually to select the candidates. The Lancaster County Poultry Association and other industry associations will solicit donations from memberships and conduct the annual golf outing. The annual spring golf outing has already been renamed the John Schwartz Memorial Golf Outing.

For more information, or to send donations, contact Jim Shirk, PennAg Industries, 2215 Forest Hills Drive, Suite 39, Harrisburg, PA 17112, (717) 651-5920, ext. 225.

FBI Alerts Pesticide Dealers

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — At the request of the FBI, and in view of the current national situation involving recent terrorist attacks, the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture (PDA) is notifying all licensed pesticide dealers of the importance of reporting any suspicious sales, attempts to purchase, and/or use of pesticide products.

An important component of surveillance is identification of "sentinel events" (unrecognized warnings) that may precede a terrorist attack and could provide opportunities for prevention.

These events may include the attempted purchase of quantities of extremely toxic pesticides, generally classified as restricted use. Also, suspicious inquires regarding these products by the general public, or inquires or purchase of equipment, especially Ultra Low Volume (ULV) application equipment by individuals who you feel have no legitimate use, should be reported.

Non-malicious misuse should continue be reported to the PDA. However, if there is suspicion of terrorist activity involving the sales and distribution of pesticides or equipment, contact the Philadelphia field office of the FBI immediately at (215) 418-4165.

The Pennsylvania State Police have also requested to be notified in case of an incident. The telephone number for the local State Police Field Installation is located on the first page of your telephone directory, or by calling directory assistance.

For information regarding this alert, contact Joe Uram, PDA Pesticide Enforcement Specialist, at (717) 772-5212.

Land O'Lakes Calls For 90 Percent Pooling Of PMMB Premium

CARLISLE (Cumberland Co.) — Land O'Lakes, Inc. is calling for a change in a regulation recently published by the Pennsylvania Milk Marketing Board (PMMB).

If approved, the current regulation will pool 45 percent the Pennsylvania Over-Order Premium among all Pennsylvania dairy producers. On behalf of its membership, Land O'Lakes has asked the PMMB to revise the regulation to approve 90 percent pooling.

"We commend the PMMB for drafting a regulation to pool the premium. However, the only way to create a fairly-distributed premium system in Pennsylvania is to pool it at 90 percent," said Gordon Hoover, Land O'Lakes corporate board member and a dairy farmer from Gap.

"Even at 45 percent pooling, one dairy farmer could be getting as much as $3,500 more annually than another farmer in Pennsylvania. Both farmers produce the same quality milk under the same economic conditions. It's just not fair that the one would get that much more of a benefit than the other."

The premium was created to help all Pennsylvania dairy farmers when faced with economic and weather-related hardships. It is collected on all Class I or fluid milk produced, processed and sold in Pennsylvania. The information used to determine the level of premium is derived from all farmers in the state, not just those in the PMMB handler pools.

However, the premium is paid back to the dairy farmers in the PMMB handler pools, regardless of whether or not the statewide data applies to their specific operations.

The over-order premium is funded by an 11.5-cent surcharge on every gallon of milk sold in Pennsylvania.

"Pooling the over-order premium at 90 percent would not affect the price the consumer pays at all," Hoover said. "I'm grateful that Pennsylvania's consumers are willing to aid farmers when there is a need. We should make sure that aid is equitably distributed among all farmers."

American Gelbvieh Association Honors Dams Of Merit

WESTMINSTER, Colo. — The American Gelbvieh Association has released its annual Dam of Distinction and Dam of Merit list. This program honors cows that calve by the age of two, rebreed quickly and consistently produce a calf year after year. Cows with longevity and stayability make money for cattle producers.

Out of the 55,243 active cows in the Gelbvieh breed, four percent or 2,200 cows were named Dam of Merit. The more elite award is the Dam of Distinction. These cows are proven producers that have had at least eight calves and only 340 cows earned this honor this year. That is less than one percent of the active cows in the breed.

Nebraska leads the way in the number of Dams of Merit and Dams of Distinction honored this year with 394 head total. Following is North Dakota with 308 and South Dakota with 307 head. Rounding out the top ten states for honored cows are: Montana, Kansas, Colorado, Missouri, Iowa, Wyoming and Minnesota.

In New York, Kraszewski Family Farms of Corning has one Dam of Distinction.

In Ohio, Butternut Farms, Bolivar, has one Dam of Distinction. Also in Ohio Catherine Dresbach, Chillicothe, has one Dam of Merit. Additionally Dresbach Farms, Chillicothe, has one Dam of Distinction and five Dams of Merit.

In Virginia, Bren-Ray Farms, Red Oak, has one Dam of Merit. Also in Virginia CH Morris & Sons, Appomattox, has four Dams of Merit. Drewry Cattle Co., Mt. Crawford, Virginia, has one Dam of Merit.

123 Hogs At Manheim Community Farm Show

MICHELLE KUNJAPPU
Lancaster Farming Staff

MANHEIM (Lancaster Co.) — Competitors at Manheim Fair's Swine Show could be proud of the champion drive, according to Matt Brandt, judge. "These hogs would be competitive in Harrisburg in KILE competition," he said. "This is a well-balanced hog show from top to bottom."

Kevin Pfautz's 265-pound hog took champion placing of the medium heavyweight classes before winning grand champion honors. Brandt was "impressed with the show quality of this hog since it came into the ring," he said. Kevin, 19, is an animal science major at Penn State. He is the son of Rick and Sue Pfautz, Lititz.

The family owns 10 sows and produces pigs to show and also to sell as 4-H projects. This is Pfautz's fourth show this year and eleventh year in 4-H. He has just gotten back from competition in Harrisburg at KILE and plans to exhibit at the Farm Show. His homebred grand champion hog will be sold Friday evening at Manheim Farm Show's sale.

Next year Pfautz would like to continue exhibiting animals and will compete in open shows at and national junior shows.

Joelynn Donough, 14, an eighth grader in the Manheim Central School District, came away with reserve champion placing with her hog. The Manheim Farm Show is her favorite fair because of the quality facilities and the caliber of the livestock exhibited. "It's tough to do well here," she said.

The Donough family is now down to two hogs after starting with more than 20 hogs at the beginning of show season. Joellyn and her two brothers show at five shows during the fair season and will exhibit animals at the Farm Show.

She also exhibits sheep and steers and had both at Manheim's Farm Show.

Judge Matt Brandt, Beavertown, manages a 1,700 farrow-to-finish hog operation. An Ohio State graduate, he is originally from Baltimore, Ohio. A former member of the Ohio State livestock judging team, Brandt judges 3-4 shows a year in Pennsylvania and Ohio.

Tunis Sheep Exhibited During KILE Competition

MICHELLE KUNJAPPU
Lancaster Farming Staff

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — The copper-colored faces of the Tunis breed were in the spotlight during Monday's breed show.

A four-hour trip from Wayland, N.Y., was worthwhile for Joshua Howe, 16, who took home champion ram honors and reserve champion ewe honors.

Howe is joined by his brother, Billy, in showing sheep. They are the sons of Bill and Laureen Howe. The family participates in various county fairs and the New York State Fair for a total of ten shows during the season.

Attending KILE, the only show they attend in Pennsylvania, is a tradition for the Howe brothers. In addition to the breed show they also exhibit their animals in KILE's junior show.

The family owns 50 head of Tunis, Hampshire, Corriedale, and Natural Colored sheep, which are housed on the 40-acre farm. Joshua shows the Tunis and Hampshire and Billy exhibits the Corriedale and Natural Colored sheep.

Laureen grew up with the Tunis breed, and Joshua recently bought his grandfather's flock. "We're honored to be able to purchase their breeding animals," said Laureen.

Joshua plans to continue the breeding work begun by his grandfather, as well as showing sheep, in the future. He is a junior at Wayland/Cohocton High School.

Jozi Best, Litchfield, Ohio, took some time off of her livestock managing and consulting business to bring a few of her Tunis sheep to the show and win champion ewe and reserve champion ram placings. She was also named premier breeder and exhibitor of the show.

Best takes her sheep to several county fairs and often frequents the "Big E" in Massachusetts. Besides KILE, she will also exhibit animals at North American International Livestock Exposition (NAILE), where she is superintendent of the Tunis breed.

Best and her husband, Matt, manage and work at the second-largest Alpaca farm in the country. She also does private consulting about sheep management, nutrition, fitting and showing, and breeding and selection. Best keeps her flock small, with 12-15 animals.

She has owned Tunis animals since the 1970's. She was introduced to sheep by her daughters, who had them as 4-H projects. "Little did I know that it would become my livelihood," she said. "Sheep have taken me around the world."

She has been through several lambing seasons in England and has traveled the world attending sheep conferences and congresses to learn more about sheep.

She enjoys the show season. "I love to be here with the sheep," she said. "My real passion is to be with the animals and the public, especially the non-ag public."

Best saw the Tunis breed at a show and "fell in love with them," she said. "Then I found out that they breed out of season, are easy keepers, and are friendly and easy to get along with."

Joshua Howe, Wayland, N.Y., exhibited the grand champion Tunis ram.

The grand champion Tunis ewe was exhibited by Jozi Best and her husband, Matthew, Litchfield, Ohio.

The breed hails from Tunisia, according to Best. "They have a several hundred year history in this country," she said. "George Washington and Thomas Jefferson had them. They were popular particularly in the South."

They have a sweet, darker meat and were almost decimated during the Civil War, when soldiers helped themselves to the sheep. The Midwest, however, had small flocks for home use. "Old-timers from the Midwest tell me that, in the 1930's, half of the sheep show barn was filled with Tunis sheep."

The Tunis were considered a rare breed, registering fewer than 500 animals per year, into the 1980's. By the mid 1990's, however, the number began to rise and now "we've been registering 1,00 each year," said Best, who added that there are also flocks that are purebred but not registered.

"They will take any kind of weather," she said. "I've had them in deep snow in Vermont, on the range in Montana, and in the dampness of Ohio."

Buster Wilson judged the show.

Producers May Attend Price Volatility Management Workshop

YORK (York Co.) — Capitol region dairy producers are encouraged to attend an upcoming marketing series planned at three locations around the region.

The program is offered in three locations: The Lighthouse Restaurant in Chambersburg Oct. 24, 31 and Nov. 7; The Country Fare Restaurant in Myerstown Oct. 25, Nov. 1 and 8; and at the Lancaster County extension office Oct. 26, Nov. 2 and 9.

While the present favorable milk price is pleasing to the cash flow, we need to think long-term about milk pricing. History tells us these excellent prices won't last forever. It's extremely important producers learn about the tools available to manage milk price now while prices are favorable.

Everyone seems to have their own opinions about forward pricing, but we can all use more understanding of the tools available to get the job done. While you may be opposed to the use of the futures markets for milk price protection, you now have at least two other alternatives. Milk commodity options allow producers to "insure" a floor price for their milk for a known investment up front. Many of the milk cooperatives now offer forward contracts that establish milk price in advance. It's important to learn how these tools can be effectively used to manage milk price.

Dr. Ken Bailey, dairy markets and policy specialist from Penn State agricultural economics, will address these topics at three locations in the capitol region: Shippensburg, Lancaster, and Lebanon.

Before you know when the market is offering a profit, establish your break-even milk price. Dr. Jeff Hyde, extension agricultural economics, will present the first day's program on developing accurate cost of production figures for the dairy operation. He will address recordkeeping needs, benchmarking, and trend analysis during the first day's sessions.

For more information about these programs or to register, call customer service in York County at (717) 840-7408. Registration is $25/person on or before Oct. 19, 2001. Late registration after the 19th is $40/participant.

MDIA 2001 Annual Meeting To Feature Dairy Management Plan

WESTMINSTER, Md. — The Maryland Dairy Industry Association (MDIA) announced that it will outline a dairy production management plan at its 2001 annual meeting here Nov. 29. The plan will be designed to assure dairy producers of "Thriving in 2002 and Beyond," theme of the 2001 annual meeting, according to MDIA President Myron L. Wilhide of Detour.

More than 150 dairy producers and industry representatives are expected to participate in the 2001 annual meeting at Wilhelm's Conference Center in this Carroll County seat.

Advance registration for MDIA members is $40 for the all-day program, $50 at the door. This includes buffet lunch, program breaks, and complete proceedings. Members can bring family or farmstead workers for an additional $30 each. Non-members are welcome at $50 in advance, or $60 at the door. Those joining on site may register at the member rate. The "Data-Mining" pre-conference seminar is $10.

Veteran dairy veterinarian Dr. Jerome K. Harness will keynote the program, outlining guidelines for maximizing economic returns in the modern dairy operation. He sets the stage for an all-day program that includes Penn State University specialist Richard Stup to discuss a farm labor management plan, dairy management consultant Brad Hilty to draft a farm investment management guide, Virginia Tech dairy specialist Dr. Ray Nebel to outline a reproduction plan and timetable, and Agway veterinarian Dr. Charles Gardner to review bio-security measures to protect and maintain dairy herd health.

MDIA's dairy experts will then assemble in a panel to complete a practical dairy management guide designed to assist dairy producers in meeting the challenges of 2002 and beyond.

Also on the agenda is a pre-conference seminar at the Carroll Community College Annex computer lab on "Data-Mining," to provide dairy producers with hands-on experience on using PC Dart management software. The seminar is being planned for 8 a.m. on Thursday, Nov. 29, ahead of MDIA's 2001 annual meeting.

The 2001 MDIA annual meeting will also feature exhibits on latest dairy technology and services, University of Maryland dairy extension reports, association business reports, and election of directors and officers.

Ag Leaders Watch Farm Bill Developments

farm bill laws has been five years, including 1996's "Freedom to Farm" bill, set to expire in September of 2002.

Redding said that the "unprecedented" 10-year length proposed for the new bill probably comes from lawmakers wanting to put more permanent policies in place to address the complexities of U.S. agriculture.

"The attitude in Washington is 'let's do this creature one time' (instead of once every five years)," he said.

Of particular interest to dairy producers is the fate of dairy compact legislation in the House's bill. Provisions which had allowed the Northeast Interstate Dairy Compact to exist, and would have allowed similar compacts to form in other regions of the country, expired Sept. 30. House lawmakers last week ruled out of order any new legislation to revive the compact provisions.

The comprehensive farm bill passed by the House must still go before the Senate before final approval. According to Redding, how the Senate responds to the bill will likely be determined by political factors.

"What will happen in the Senate is a big question mark," he said.

Focusing on how the new bill would affect Pennsylvania farmers, Redding cited figures from 1998 and 1999 showing that government payments in Pennsylvania were $.02 per dollar of farm production, compared to some midwestern and western states where the figure swelled, reaching as high as $.24 per dollar in Montana and $.27 per dollar in North Dakota.

Although such figures may give the impression that federal farm policy has little significance in Pennsylvania, Redding said the state's opportunities for involvement are growing.

"We know that (Pennsylvania) farmers are increasingly participating (in federal programs)," he said.

Although Redding acknowledged that the farm bill is primarily driven by grain rather than the livestock, dairy, and egg production which typify much of the agriculture in Pennsylvania and other eastern states, he pointed out that advantages here in infrastructure, diversity, and large numbers of consumers and food processors help balance the effects of uneven government funding.

One major area that Pennsylvania likely stands to benefit will be increases in conservation funding, including an expanded Conservation Resource Program, and nutrient management and water quality incentives.

"This will probably be one of the greenest farm bills we've ever had," Redding said.

Highlights of the new House Farm Bill include:

•Fixed payment subsidies would be expanded to include soybeans and other oilseeds.

•A 1996 law to establish dairy marketing loans would be rescinded. The government would continue to buy surplus butter, cheese, and nonfat dry milk powder. Dairies would still be required to pay farmers at least $9.90 per hundredweight of milk.

•Countercyclical payments would be provided to crop producers when prices fall below established target rates.

•Conservation funding would increase by 75 percent. Three million more acres, for a total of 39 million, would be enrolled in the Conservation Reserve Program.

•The food stamp program would receive $3.7 billion in additional funding.

• Rural development initiatives would receive $1.8 billion in additional funding.

•Mandatory research spending on plant and animal genomics, food safety, biomass products, and natural resource management would be increased by 22 percent to $145 million annually beginning in fiscal 2004.

Russell Redding briefs local ag leaders.

Redding used part of the session to remind producers that Pennsylvania's Crop Insurance Assistance Program has been extended to include crop year 2002.

The program has enrolled increasing acreage since 1999 and is expected to exceed a million acres in 2001, Redding said.

Farmers can sign up free of charge for a catastrophic loss policy that provides payments on crop losses of 50 percent or more.

"Our goal is to get producers in Pennsylvania to sign up for crop insurance," Redding said. "This is one of the things government can do to fundamentally change the behavior of producers and how they view their business and risk management."

Remaining deadlines for enrollment are Nov. 20 for tree and vine crops and March 15 for spring plantings.

Maryland Grain Producers Speak To Non- Farm Groups

EDGEWATER, Md. — Members of the Maryland Grain Producers Association are optimistic about the first year for their Speakers Bureau.

The Speakers Bureau is composed of 25 members of the agricultural community. Some are farmers, some involved agribusiness, and other employed by the Maryland Department of Agriculture and Cooperative Extension Offices. They have volunteered their time to do a presentation entitled, "Food for Thought...Understanding Maryland Farms."

This is a 20- to 30-minute slide show/discussion addressing issues involving agriculture and is directed to non-farming groups in hopes of giving them a better understanding of agriculture and the importance it weighs on our lives.

To reserve a speaker, contact Celeste Pyper, Speakers Bureau coordinator at (410) 819-0414.

KILE's Superior Beef Show Results

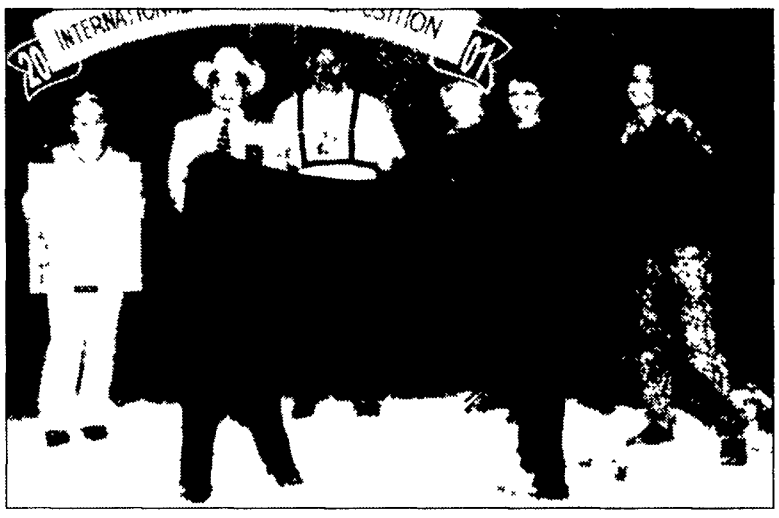
HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Six beef breeds including Angus, Hereford, Highland, Limousin, Shorthorn, and Simmental were exhibited at the 45th annual Keystone International Livestock Exposition (KILE) conducted here Oct. 2-8.

Making its first appearance in the KILE show ring this year was the Highland breed, with Larry Zea of Blackduck, Mich., taking home grand champion female honors. John and Judith Ligo of Grove City were named premier exhibitor and breeder in the Highland show.

Other beef highlights at KILE were the Eastern Junior Breeding Cattle Show, the Junior Steer Show, and a Simmental exposition dubbed the "Performance Through Progress Show."

Tyler Tessier of Brookville took home the heavyweight and grand champion honors in the Junior Steer Show. Reserve grand champion went to Alyssa Nocek of Dunkirk, N.Y. Winners in the lightweight class were Meagan and Justin Fuls, both of Richland. Dayna Filges of Butler and Kristy Deitrich of Hamburg exhibited the middleweight champions.

Bill Shoemaker of the Pennsylvania Simmental Association said he has been attending KILE for 20 years and this year's show topped them all.



This senior calf was named grand champion Angus female at KILE last week. From left, Pa. Angus Sweetheart Kim Long and judge Calvin Drake with Larry Weaver, Brady Ebersole, Barb Weaver, and Kristen Ebersole of Weaverland Valley Farm, New Holland.

"This is the biggest and best show I've ever ever seen at the Keystone," he said.

National Angus Conference Features Speakers, Tours

ST. JOSEPH, Mo. — More than 400 Angus enthusiasts and cattle producers from 28 states and Canada met October 1-3 in North Platte, Neb., for the 2001 National Angus Conference and Tour.

The conference, "Leading the Angus Advance," featured some of the beef industry's top speakers, and followed the two-day tour of Angus herds in the Nebraska Sandhills.

Keynote speaker William Mies, formerly of Texas A&M University and currently with Future Beef Operations LLC, addressed the group about the changes that have occurred in the beef industry and the changes that will continue in order to be more efficient in producing meat for the consumer.

"You are very fortunate in this breed in that you sit on the one tool that no one else has that would allow you to respond to these changes, and that's the database," Mies says about the Angus breed changing with the industry.

Mies discussed the evolution of carcass beef to boxed beef, and he said another change is yet to occur—case-ready product provided to retailers.

"Case ready is the ultimate in what we're going to do to provide meat into the retail chain," Mies says.

Case-ready product shipped from the packer to the retailer will allow more meat with less waste shipped. It also decreases liability for retailers involved in food safety accidents due to microbiological contamination, as the retailer will no longer be cutting and packaging the meat.

"To lead the Angus advance, you are going to have to rely on the database you have built. Identify those genetic lines that give you the combination of marbling and that give you adequate muscling," Mies says.

Bill Beal, professor of animal and poultry science at Virginia Tech, discussed the foundation of producing the end productbasics of the reproduction cycleusing props and audience participation to explain the estrous cycle.

"If you understand the estrous cycle of a cow, you essentially know everything that is essential to reproduction of a cow," Beal says.

Using a simple demonstration and props such a balloon for the follicle and a ball for the egg, Beal demonstrated how simple the estrous cycle is to understand, and how important it is for success in breeding.

In an effort to meet the needs of the commercial cattle producers, the American Angus Association formed the commercial relations department three years ago. Bill Bowman, director of commercial relations, described the programs that are in place to assist commercial producers including the Angus Resource Clearinghouse Network (ARC-Net), the Bull Listing Service and the Angus Beef Record Service (BRS).

He stressed that information flow between the seed stock and commercial cattle producers and through the marketing system is crucial.

He adds that source verification will be important as branded beef programs such as Certified Angus Beef (CAB) LLC, continue to grow. Source verification begins with the producer who identifies each individual animal. Today, only one-third of ranches and one-third of the feedlots have individual identification systems in place.

James Henderson, general manager for B3R Country Meats in Childress, Texas, presented material about information flow and its importance in the beef industry. Henderson said a top priority for their company is to gather data to share with their customers.

"The most important thing about gathering information is discipline," Henderson told the group. "There's many methods of gathering information, but the discipline to gather that information is the thing that you've got to get utmost in your mind."

Other speakers on the program included Twig Marston, associate professor and Extension beef specialist, Kansas State University (K-State); Dan Moser, assistant professor of animal sciences and industry, K-State; Doyle Wilson, professor of animal science, Iowa State University; Tim Schiefelbein, value-based procurement manager, ConAgra Foods Inc.; and John Landry, Certified Angus Beef brand and center-of-the-plate specialist, Sysco Food Service. Audio recordings of the conference speakers, along with photographs and copies of their speeches are also available online at www.angusjournal.com/nationalconference.

Attendees spent the two days preceding the conference on a tour across the Nebraska Sandhills. During the two days, they visited a commercial feedlot, registered and commercial Angus herds and the historic Haythorn Land & Cattle Co.

Land O'Lakes Buys Purina Mills

ARDEN HILLS, Minn. — On Thursday, Land O'Lakes completed its acquisition of Purina Mills, Inc. (Nasdaq: PMIL), at the cash price of $23 per share of Purina Mills stock.

Purina Mills will become part of the consolidated business operated by Land O'Lakes Farmland Feed LLC.

Jack Gherty, Land O'Lakes president and chief executive officer, said the acquisition addresses ongoing feed industry trends.

"Through this acquisition, we are building the economics of scale and critical mass necessary to compete in the consolidating feed industry," he said.

The combined organization's annual feed sales are expected to total approximately $2.5 billion.

In a release, it was noted, through the new structure, Land O'Lakes Farmland Feed and Purina Mills dealers will be served through separate, brand-dedicated sales and marketing groups, with the expanded organization delivering additional value through increased efficiency in production, distribution, and research and development.

Land O'Lakes Farmland Feed President Bob DeGregorio will lead the combined company.

NASS Releases Study Of Women On Farms

WASHINGTON, D.C.— The USDA's National Agricultural Statistics Service (NASS) conducted a new survey of adult women on U.S. farms.

Of those women responding to the survey, 81% were involved in the operation, yet less than half (46%) were actually raised on a farm or ranch.

The new study, conducted in the spring of 2001 in cooperation with the Pennsylvania State University, comprised a random sample of 7,500 farms across the Nation.

Of the women interviewed, 10 percent classified themselves as the principle farm operator while nearly one-third considered themselves a full partner in the farm business.

Another 40 percent reported being involved in the farm operation as a business manager or helper, and the remaining 19 percent were not involved directly in the farm operation.

Half (50%) of the women interviewed reported having a paid job off the farm.

The median age of women on farms was 53. Nearly one-quarter of the women have completed some college while 15 percent have at least a 4-year college degree.

The study measured the involvement of women in farm tasks, farm decision-making, farm organizations, and government-related programs.

In addition, data were collected on the socio-demographic characteristics of the women and their participation in non-farm work. In some cases, husbands or domestic partners were also interviewed.

A more detailed report will be released at a later date.

Dairy Industry To Celebrate Jan Harding's Devotion To PDPPS

LOU ANN GOOD
Food And Family Features Editor

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Jan Harding and dairy promotion is a "class act," according to William Nichol, past president of the Pennsylvania Holstein Association.

Harding has long been recognized as the backbone of the Pennsylvania Dairy Princess and Promotions Services (PDPPS). She has honed the speaking skills of 612 county princesses, 513 alternate county princesses, and 1,388 junior promoters, and helped them grow into effective proponents of dairy promotion.

"Jan always prepared the girls (dairy princesses) to do an excellent job," said Nichol.

"While she perfected the talents of so many dairy princesses, Jan was considered a dairy princess in her own right who performed a class act," Nichol said. "She ran the (dairy princess) program and kept it in the limelight."

Of course, Jan is quick to defer her influence by pointing to the PPDPS board as the reason for the growth and positive results dairy promotion has established. Those who know Jan well know that she is a team player always quick to give praise to those who contribute time and effort to promote her favorite commodity — milk.

A person with Jan's city-bred background seemed an unlikely prospect to have become so entrenched in so many different facets of the dairy industry, but her story shows the powerful influence that childhood memories can have on career choices.

Growing up in a New York suburb, Jan remembers visiting a New Jersey farm as a three-year-old. Her passion for the farm became so firmly entrenched within her that she adopted the owner of the farm run by a "courtesy aunt" and visited the farm as often as her parents allowed. Jan remembers staying at the farm for several weeks at a time, and taking the train by herself during school vacations to stay at the farm.

Following family tradition, Jan was graduated from Vassar College with a degree in economics and political science. But even in college, Jan found a way to pursue her interest in dairying. She worked with the county agent on the college farm, which raised Guernsey cows. After graduation from Vassar, Jan signed up for a dairy farming short course at Rutgers University, where contacts soon landed her a job with the New Jersey State Guernsey Breeders' Association.

In 1954, Jan was hired by the American Guernsey Cattle Club (now known as the America Guernsey Cattle Association) to expand its milk marketing program. That was in the days of milk delivery to homes, and Jan believed the most effective way to market milk was to talk with consumers. She often accompanied home delivery salesmen on their trucks and convinced new consumers to buy Guernsey milk. Her promotional approach was so effective that it became known as The Frost Program, and traveled across the U.S. teaching salespersons how to sell milk.

As the national sales representative for the American Guernsey Club, it seemed predestined that Jan would meet Eugene Harding, who had the highest Guernsey producing herd In Pennsylvania.

The couple married, had five children, Jeff, Jim, Judy, Jennifer, and Greg, and combined their talents to build Golden Guernsey Maplevale Farm Dairy

(Turn to Page B14)

After the death of her first husband, Jan married Charles Ruslavage, a widower with six children.

After 17 years as executive director of PDPPS, Jan Harding is retiring. A celebration honoring her numerous achievements for the dairy industy is scheduled for Sunday, Oct. 14, from 1 p.m.-4 p.m.at the special events building on the Ag Progress site, Rock Spring.

Typically Jan Harding and the dairy industry go hand-in-hand, but Highland cattle became one of her loves in recent years, when daughter Judy Ligo, Grove City, started raising them. Jan and son Jeff often give Judy and her husband John a helping hand at shows.

After her marriage to Eugene Harding (now deceased), the couple expanded their dairy operation in Jefferson County by building Maplevale Farm Dairy Store and Guernsey Maid Restaurant.

Will the elevator hold this much stuff? Scenes such as this one were commonplace throughout Jan's PDPPS career as she with PDPPS coordinators and dairy princesses traveled from place to place to promote the dairy industry.

On Being a Farm Wife

Joyce Bupp

We're rounding up the leftovers.

Leftovers account for most of the odd assortment of foods currently hovering around the house. Like the two orange-red peppers cooling their heels on the back porch, lingering in the outdoor temperatures to which they've grown accustomed. A handful of volunteer potatoes, small container of yellow-skinned onions, and a lush planter full of pretty, green parsley seedlings, from seed produced by a plant carried over the winter, also add to our leftovers of the fading season.

Cylindrical-shaped red beets wait to become a tasty addition to an upcoming menu. Red beet seed I planted in spring never germinated well in the dry conditions. But we have the good fortune to trade excess leftovers with the keepers of the next-generation family garden across the meadow. In fact, most of the peppers we've enjoyed this summer originated there, since our three plants turned out to be pretty poor performers.

Tomatoes, on the other hand, yielded bushels, and we spent weeks shuffling them around from garden to porch, to kitchen to canned goods shelves, to foisting them off onto friends. We've enjoyed plump, juicy ones that filled the palm of my hand, super-sweet cherry minis, plum types shaped pudgy and bell-like and a long, skinny variety which clung to the vines for weeks, just getting redder. As chilly weather closes their harvest, those leftovers become increasingly prized.

Actually, we hope to enjoy leftover tomatoes for many weeks, with a bounty of Long Keepers tucked into storage in flats ahead of the cold front which arrived early in the week. Though overrun with an infestation of morning glories gone wild, the corner of garden devoted to these long-hold tomatoes yielded well. With these treasures carefully squirreled away, we hope to enjoy fresh tomatoes in salads and sandwiches long after frost blackens the rest.

Dry, brown, crackly string bean pods swing from the yard fence in the breeze, leftovers of this year, resulting from leftovers from last year. The volunteer pole beans dropped into the soil last fall as season tail-enders, then germinated unnoticed in spring at the foot of a row of sunflowers. Under thick leaf cover, they stealthily wove their way up through the tall "stakes," which provided perfect support and dappled shade for the beans to thrive.

By the time the sunflowers were fading, and the long, fat pods became more visible, they were well on their way to the leftover stage. So the mature, dry shelled out bean seeds will spend the winter where other leftovers get forgotten: refrigerated. Maybe a note on the calendar for next spring will jog my memory to plant them. Leftovers stuff the greenhouse, where several dozen assorted houseplants and potted greenery were quickly stashed ahead of frost threats. Pots of leafy ferns battle for space with planters of geranium and marigolds, still colorful wax begonias, impatiens and the Norfolk Island Pine, now topping six feet and poking up against the plastic inner-liner of the ceiling.

Moving the houseplants inside is always one of those jobs that is put off until the very last moment. It seems so unfair to move them in when days are bright and sunshiny and they add their cheery colors to the porches and deck. So, I inevitably find myself, year after year, lugging dusty, spider-web-decorated pots into safekeeping decked out in hat, gloves, sweatshirt, and winter vest.

Sometimes darkness arrives before the last are moved in, leaving me trudging around in the dark, maybe with a flashlight or by moonlight, as stars snicker down from overhead at us procrastinators.

Somewhere in the past, the image of leftovers took on a somewhat negative connotation. Leftovers are often thought of as lower in quality than the original, less desirable, something to store and maybe eventually pitch out, offal that those of higher taste might not want to have anything to do with.

And the green, fuzzy stuff growing on who knows what buried somewhere in the backs of many of our refrigerators tends to leave that impression.

But leftovers mean that we have more abundance of something than we can use, more than we can wear, more that we can eat. And so we save it for another day, share it with someone else, or make it into something completely new and useful. Hopefully before it grows green fuzz.

Maybe we need to put a new spin on our image of leftovers.

After we clean this unknown stuff out of the refrigerator.

Broccoli, Cabbage, Cauliflower Harvest

The cool fall weather is the ideal climate for broccoli, cabbage, cauliflower, collards and kale. Growers are just starting to harvest the fall crop of broccoli and cauliflower while the cabbage harvest is continuing since it began in July. The harvest will continue throughout the fall.

Cabbage by itself ranks as the sixth most important Pennsylvania vegetable crop in terms of acreage. More than 1,700 acres are grown each year and are usually harvested from late June into December. Pennsylvania ranks 12th in the nation in the production of cabbage.

About 400 acres each of collards and kale are grown along with roughly 350 acres of broccoli and 230 acres of cauliflower. While many growers across the state grow broccoli and cauliflower in small acreages, the production of collards and kale is concentrated among a few growers with large acreages in southeast Pennsylvania.

The cabbage family is also known as the Cruciferae family because their flowers are shaped like a cross. According to the Wellness Encyclopedia of Food and Nutrition of the University of California at Berkeley, cruciferous vegetables contain indoles — nitrogen compounds — that seem to protect against cancers of the stomach and large intestine. They also are generally high in fiber and antioxidants like vitamin C and carotenoids. Antioxidants neutralize the action of free radicals — unstable oxygen molecules — which promote cancer. Cruciferous vegetables also contain compounds that stimulate the release of anticancer enzymes.

Some people object to the odor produced by cooking cruciferous vegetables. The odor is caused by the release of sulfur compounds as these vegetables cook. While boiling cruciferous vegetables in large amounts of water in an open pot will minimize the characteristic strong cabbage taste, it maximizes the loss of nutrients. Steaming, microwaving or quick cooking in small amounts of water minimizes nutrient loss in the cooking process. Of course, broccoli, cabbage and cauliflower can all be enjoyed raw by themselves or in salads.

Dietary experts recommend including cruciferous vegetables in the diet regularly, at least several times a week. They also recommend a daily serving of a vegetable (or fruit) high in vitamin A, one high in vitamin C and one high in fiber. Broccoli fulfills all three requirements while cabbage and cauliflower fulfill the vitamin C and fiber requirement. Noted Lancaster County cookbook author Betty Groff offers the following recipes to help you enjoy Pennsylvania cabbage, broccoli and cauliflower.

Baked Cabbage

1 medium head cabbage
2 Tablespoons flour
1 teaspoon salt
Freshly ground pepper
½ teaspoon chives
1 teaspoon chervil
2 Tablespoons sugar
3 Tablespoons butter
1 cup hot milk
½ cup grated cheese

Cut cabbage in wedges ¼ inch thick and boil in water for 10 minutes. Drain well and place in a buttered casserole. Sprinkle with the flour, salt, pepper, chives, chervil and sugar. Dot with butter. Pour the hot milk over the cabbage and top with the grated cheese. Bake in preheated 350°F. oven for 35 minutes.

Ham-Stuffed Cabbage Rolls

Serves 6 to 8

2½ pound head of cabbage
2 pounds smoked ham, ground
1 cup cooked rice
1 cup dried bread crumbs
2 eggs, lightly beaten
½ cup onion, preferably 6 or 7 green (spring) onions
½ cup crushed pineapple
Salt and pepper to taste
Orange-pineapple sauce, see below

Rinse cabbage. Cut out the core and remove the outer two or three leaves from the head. Save them and any other leaves that are torn or too small and cover the bottom of a large saucepan or Dutch oven. This will help prevent the cabbage rolls from sticking while cooking. Place the cabbage in a casserole dish and microwave on high for 8 minutes in ½ inch of water, covered with wax paper. Drain. When cool enough, remove the outer 12 to 16 leaves and cut off the thick rib at the back of each leaf. Combine the meat, rice, crumbs, eggs, onions, pineapple, salt and pepper and mix well with your hands. Divide into 12 to 16 equal balls and flatten them slightly in the center of each leaf. Fold the sides in and overlap the top and bottom securely, then place seam side down in the saucepan. Top with orange-pineapple sauce and simmer, covered, for an hour or longer. Serve with additional rice on the side if desired.

Orange-Pineapple Sauce

4 Tablespoons sugar
2 Tablespoons cornstarch
1½ cups orange juice
1½ cups pineapple juice
1 cup pineapple tidbits
Few drops of red food coloring (optional)

Mix sugar and cornstarch together and stir into the juices. Heat, stirring constantly until clear and thickened, then add coloring, if desired, and fruit. Add more of either juice if extra liquid is needed.

Betty's Baked Corn And Broccoli Pudding

Serves 6

This is easy, delicious, and pretty served in the baking dish. The first evening we served it, our guests all asked for seconds. The recipe has a custard-like consistency. It is quite different from the better-known baked corn. It can also be prepared in an electric skillet for an outdoor party.

4 Tablespoons butter
4 cups broccoli buds
4 cups corn kernels
Grated zest of 1 lemon (yellow part only)
Freshly ground black pepper
⅓ cup flour
2 teaspoons salt
1 teaspoon sugar
4 eggs
1 cup milk

Use 1 Tablespoon of the butter to butter a 9-inch by 13-inch baking dish. Arrange the broccoli buds at each end of the dish. Put the corn in the center. Sprinkle the lemon zest over the broccoli, and grind pepper over the corn

In a bowl, combine the flour, salt, sugar, and remaining butter. Gradually add the eggs and mix well. Stir in the milk to make a thin batter. Pour over the vegetables. Bake in a preheated 350°F oven for 1 hour until the egg mixture is set and firm. Bake longer, if needed. To test the pudding, insert a silver knife in the center. It is ready when the knife comes out clean. We used to test this recipe with a broom straw, but who has a broom anymore?

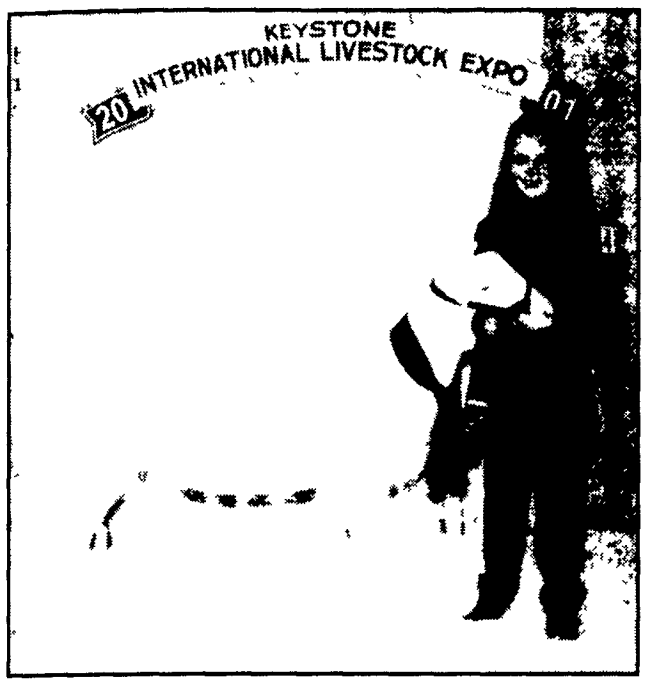
Style And Class On Display At Keystone Lead Line



In the junior division of the Keystone Lead Line, Lindsey Beatty, Enon Valley, and her Dorset ewe placed first.

Pennsylvania Agricultural Secretary Samuel Hayes Jr. congratulates Amanda Miller, senior division winner of Kile Lead Line.

Intermediate division winner Kelsie Smith, Glencoe, modeled a hunter green-lined green cape and coordinating black watch plaid dress that she made herself.

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — More than 20 young ladies from across Pennsylvania and surrounding states participated in this year's Keystone Lead Line at the 45th annual Keystone International Livestock Exposition.

Each contestant displayed a wool ensemble and sheep. The contestants were judged on their outfit, the fitting of their sheep, and poise.

In the junior contest, Lindsey Beatty, Enon Valley, was selected as the winner. Lindsey wore a royal blue pantsuit and led her Dorset ewe, Libby, in the contest.

The placings in the junior division are as follows: Lindsey Beatty, Enon Valley; Kara Kingsley, Volant; Katrina Frey, Quarryville; Katelyn Melvin, Mt. Sterling, Ohio; Marci Estock, Louisville, Ohio; Kelsey Binkley, Conestoga; Abby Benninghoff, Bessemer; Emily Butt, New Park; Susannah McLeod, Millers, Md.; Megan Murchison, New Egypt, N.J.

Kelsie Smith, Glencoe, won the intermediate division class. Kelsie modeled a hunter green-lined green cape and coordinating black watch plaid dress that she made herself. The dress is a Civil War era dress that Kelsie will wear in Civil War re-enactments this year. Kelsie led Angel, a Hampshire Ewe, that wore a matching wool bow with flowers.

The placings for the intermediate division were as follows: Kelsie Smith, Glencoe; Emma Little, Churchville, Md.; Megan Van Wie, Clayton, N.Y.; Carrie Hartman, Bernville; Laura Hunter, Stockton, N.Y.; Nichole Knight, Saegertown; and Rebecca Butt, New Park.

The senior division faced tight competition between six young ladies. The panel of judges selected Amanda Miller of Bernville, as the senior division class winner. Amanda wore a 100 percent wool dark teal dress and coordinating jacket that she made. Accompanying her into the show ring was her Southdown ewe, Honey. Other senior division results were Bethany Tuhacek, Harleysville; Christine Benningoff, New Castle; Deidra Smith, Glencoe; Sara Lutz, West Salem; and Emily Adham, Street, Md.

The Keystone Lead Line is in conjunction with the 45th annual Keystone International Livestock Exposition (KILE).

'Wooly' Time For Manheim Farm Show Lead Line

LOU ANN GOOD
Food And Family
Features Editor

MANHEIM (Lancaster Co.) — Temperatures plummeted into the low 30s Monday evening during Manheim Farm Show's Lead Line Competition, but the four-legged woolly contenders confirmed that their coats can withstand the coldest weather.

Contestants leading the sheep also dressed in wool and were judged on their outfits, their ability to control the sheep, and the sheep breed's characteristics.

Winners in the three divisions included girls' category — 1. Kelsey Binkley, 2. Roanna Martin, 3. Bobbi Bentzel. Boys division — 1. Doug Musser, 2. Radell Peters, 3. Brandon Price; and adult — 1. Julie Stallman, 2. Cathy Musser.

Bobbi Bentzel leads her Shropshire lamb, Glitter.

Kelsey, 11, modeled a lavender 100 percent wool crepe dress and jacket that she sewed. The above waist, long sleeve jacket had a matching scalloped him. Kelsey also carried a purse that she made from lamb's leather. Kelsey's registered Polled Dorset yearling ewe named Sal sported a matching wool scarf.

Doug, 10, wore 100 percent worsted wool navy blue and maroon pinstripe trousers and matching vest. To complete his outfit, Doug selected a wool Ivy League cap and his lamb Rocket wore a coordinating wool scarf around her neck.

Julie borrowed her daughter's sheep, an aged ewe named Lucky considered a valued member of her family.

Julie used her sewing talents to stitch a black-limed wool skirt with a coordinating blue and black plaid jacket. She enjoys teaching her daughter Heather to sew and said the two of them live on a 15-acre farmette in Penryn with various four-legged critters.

Make It With Rice

MIDEASTERN SETTLERS CHEESY BEEF HOTPOT

¾ cup long-grain rice
½ cup shredded mozzarella cheese
Freshly ground pepper, to taste
2 tablespoons olive oil
½ pound lean beef tips
½ pound fresh Italian sausage, removed from casing
1¼ cups Italian pasta sauce with herbs, mushrooms, garlic
½ cup thinly sliced Fontina cheese or provolone cheese
½ cup thinly sliced Swiss cheese

Cook rice according to package directions; cool. Add mozzarella cheese. Season with pepper.

Preheat oven to 350 degrees.

Cut beef tips into thin strips. In a large skillet, add oil and place skillet over medium heat. When oil is hot, add beef tips and sausage (break up sausage with a fork while cooking) and cook until brown, about 4-6 minutes.

On the bottom of 9x13-inch baking dish, layer half of the rice and mozzarella mixture, half of the tomato sauce, and half the beef tips and sausage. Repeat the rice, sauce, and meat layering and top the final layer with fontina and Swiss cheeses.

Cook 15-20 minutes in oven until the cheeses have melted. Allow the dish to stand five minutes. Cut and serve.

APPLE BROWN RICE STUFFING

1 medium apple, cored and diced
½ cup chopped onions
½ cup sliced celery

½ teaspoon poultry seasoning
¼ teaspoon dry thyme leaves
¼ teaspoon ground black pepper
2 teaspoons butter
3 cups cooked brown rice (cooked in apple juice)
⅓ cup rice bran
⅓ cup slivered, toasted almonds
¼ cup apple juice

Cook apple, onions, celery, raisins, poultry seasoning, thyme, and pepper in butter in large skillet until vegetables are tender crisp. Stir in remaining ingredients. Use as a stuffing for poultry or pork roast. To serve as a side dish, cook until thoroughly heated.

CRANBERRY PEAR CRISP

3 cups cooked brown rice
2 cups diced, peeled pears
1 cup fresh or frozen chopped cranberries
½ cup packed brown sugar, divided ⅓ cup flour, divided vegetable cooking spray
¼ cup rolled oats
3 tablespoons butter
¼ cup chopped pecans
¼ cup flaked coconut

C ombine rice, pears, cranberries, ⅓ cup sugar, and two tablespoons flour. Place rice mixture in 2-quart baking dish with cooking spray; set aside. Combine remaining flour, remaining sugar, and oats in bowl. Cut in butter with pastry blender until mixture resembles coarse meal. Add pecans and coconut; blend well. Sprinkle over rice mixture. Bake at 375 degrees for 25 minutes or until thoroughly heated. Serve warm. Makes eight servings.

GREEN BEAN ALMOND RICE

1 tablespoon butter
½ cup slivered almonds
½ cup chopped onion
⅓ cup chopped red pepper
3 cups cooked brown rice (cooked in beef broth)
10 ounces frozen French-style green beans, thawed
⅛ to ¼ ground white pepper
¼ teaspoon tarragon

Melt butter in large skillet over medium-high heat. Add almonds; stir until lightly browned. Add onions and red pepper; cook for two minutes or until tender. Add rice, green beans, white pepper, and tarragon. Stir until thoroughly heated. Makes eight servings.

2 tablespoons butter
¼ cup finely-chopped red pepper
½ cup heavy cream
⅓ cup crumbled bleu cheese
1-½ cups cooked rice
1 tablespoon minced fresh basil
⅛ teaspoon ground white pepper fresh basil, chopped, for garnish

Clean mushrooms with damp paper towel. Remove mushroom stems; finely chop stems and set aside.

Saute mushroom caps in butter in skillet until almost tender; drain on paper towels. Saute mushroom stems and red pepper in skillet.

Add cream; bring to a boil. Reduce heat and add cheese; cook until melted. Stir in rice, basil, and pepper; cook until thoroughly heated. Spoon rice mixture into mushroom caps.

Place mushroom caps in greased shallow baking pan. Cover and bake at 350 degrees for 10 minutes or until tender.

Drain on paper towels. Garnish stuffed mushrooms with basil. Makes 20 appetizers.

1 teaspoon vanilla extract
1 cup whipping cream, whipped
1 prepared chocolate crumb crust
¼ cup fudge sauce

⅓ cup sliced green onions, including tops
1 clove garlic, minced

⅓ cup sliced green onions, including tops
⅓ cup sliced mushrooms
¼ cup diced red or green pepper
¼ cup frozen green peas, thawed
1 egg, beaten
2 cups cooked rice, chilled
1 tablespoon soy sauce

Cook bacon in large skillet over medium-low heat until crisp. Increase heat to medium. Add onions, mushrooms, pepper, and peas. Stir-fry on minute. Push vegetables aside; pour egg into skillet and scramble. Add rice and soy sauce; stir until heated, gently separating grains.

HEARTY CHICKEN AND RICE SOUP

10 cups chicken broth

Eastern York FFA Wins Award With 'City Scapes'

JOYCE BUPP
York Co. Correspondent

WRIGHTSVILLE (York Co.) — Block laying, construction, and patio planting were just a few of the skills polished by a team of Eastern York FFA members while designing an award-winning landscape display.

The 10 by 15-feet display won first place in the Farm Show competition in January, as well as honors for best design and best blueprint.

At the close of Farm Show week, team members tore down and stored the vital, non-perishable components of the design, and then hauled it north recently with fresh plant materials to reassemble. That reassembly of "City Cafe" was Pennsylvania's entry in the regional competition conducted recently at the Eastern States Exposition at Springfield, Mass., with the theme "City-Scapes." The Eastern FFA team's display took second place at the "Big E" competition.

Team members built the city cafe facade, with its planted patio area, as an offshoot of their studies in landscape design and soil science, part of the agriscience curriculum offered by instructor Scott Barr. Barr and parent Barry Miller accompanied the team, which included Sarah Erdman, Julie Flinchbaugh, Abby Lauchman, Dawn Miller, Mackie Miller, and Megan Oberdick.

"It was an idea that came up in our landscape class and everyone had different ideas about what we could do," said team member Julie Flinchbaugh. The landscape competition was an especially useful learning opportunity for Flinchbaugh, 17, a senior looking ahead to college studies in horticulture.

"Some of the team did the brick work and some did the pavers; everyone just sort of picked what they wanted to help with," Flinchbaugh said. "Then we went looking for plants to use in the display and Shiloh Nurseries were very helpful."

Most of the class lent a hand when the time came to set up the display for Farm Show competition.

"It was up on the second story," said Flinchbaugh, "and we had to cut one of the walls of the display apart and rebuilt it. That was kind of a test of our patience."

After winning the January competition, the team tore down the cityscape components and stored them away. In mid-September, they loaded building materials, plants, team members and advisers up to travel north to the Massachusetts show site to compete against winning displays from other states in the region.

Space again created some challenges for the FFA team, when they discovered their display area was smaller than their landscape design. Again, out came the tools for quick re-engineering, but only after removing a large mound of mulch which had been dumped for their use right in the middle of their display site.

Despite the eight hours it took to reconstruct their entry, Flinchbaugh called the Big E show "an awesome one," where team members had the chance to visit with students participating from other states. The group returned to the site last week when the show closed to disassemble their second place winning design, while planning their display for the upcoming, 2002 Farm Show.

Support from local businesses, with plants and assorted materials, helped to both hold down costs and offer community encouragement to the landscape team's efforts. Businesses participating included Shiloh Nurseries, Emigsville, River Valley Landscapes, Wrightsville, Lowe's of York, Stauffers, Hellam, 21st Century Appraisals at Middletown and Diversified Liquidators, Wrightsville.

Portable Kitchen

You are moving in the next few months or just want to be prepared for an emergency evacuation or your next camping trip. If so, contact your Pennsylvania extension agent about a copy of "Portable Kitchen. This guide shows how to assemble a kitchen of 40 or more gadgets in two regular-sized dishpans. No, the refrigerator and the oven are not included, but if you are in a situation where you need access to preparation supplies, including waxed paper, foil, wrap and garbage bags, this idea may be for you.

Originally designed to allow nutrition education workers to transport their demonstration materials by bus to housing projects, consumers in all 50 states have requested bulletins. The two dishpans form a make shift sink and carry the food preparation equipment and supplies. Pictures of all the equipment are provided so you can purchase the materials by name or seek out less expensive equipment at dollar stores and garage sales.

Fully equipped, the portable kitchen weighs approximately eight pounds. The only non-standard piece of equipment is the baking sheet which is toaster size (you can obtain these in specialty kitchen shops or catalogs).

The most unusual item is a clean food storage cap (looks like a shower cap with elastic edges) to cover unused food products in the mixing bowl to save a mess after food preparation. Choose boxes of wrap and foil that are similar in size so they fit securely together. It is better if each box contains only half the product to make the kit lighter to carry.

This project would be a fun family, scout, 4-H, or other youth group project and something both adults and youth will enjoy. Of course, the kit can be customized to your needs.

To locate a copy of the Portable Kitchen, phone or write your local Cooperative Extension Office. If they do not have the bulletin in stock or you are from out of state, contact Jan Scholl, 323 Ag Admin Building, University Park 16802 (jscholl@psu.edu). Please limit your request to one copy.

ANSWER — Barbara Randall, Bloomfield, N.Y., recently purchased instant Clear Jel at a bulk food store and wanted recipes and advice for using it. Thanks to a Cumberland County reader for sending recipes and for explaining that instant clear jel is great to make fresh fruit pies. She also sends a recipe for a fruit dessert that requires the clear jel that needs to be cooked. Another product called Therm-Flo can be used in place of clear jel if you want to freeze items since clear jel does not freeze well. Dutch jell is fine for jams and jellies. Here are some of her recipes.

Fresh Fruit Pie

1 quart fresh fruit
¾ cup water
1 cup sugar (or less if desired)
4 tablespoons instant clear jel

Mix instant clear jel and sugar together very thoroughly.

Add water to fruit, add sugar and clear-jel mixture. Stir gently until well mixed. Pour into prepared pie crust or graham crust of your choice. This works especially well with fresh strawberries or peaches.

Dutch Danish Dessert

1 quart water (save some water to mix with clear jel)
1 package Kool-aid
½ cup clear jel
1 cup sugar
1 pint fresh or frozen fruit

Mix remaining water, sugar, and Kool-aid. Bring mixture to boil. Mix reserved water with clear jel and add to boiling water, stirring rapidly and constantly. Simmer 5 minutes. (Or turn off burner and let kettle set 5 minutes — mixture will have a more clear appearance). Remove from heat. Add fruit. Cool. To serve, garnish with whipped cream topping or mini-marshmallows.

Match the Kool-aid flavor with fruit flavor. You may also add one small box Jell-O of same flavor before adding fruit, if desired, then cut back on the sugar.

Thanks to Rhoda Conover, Gettysburg, who also sends these hints for using clear jel:

• For one pie — combine 3 tablespoons instant clear jell with ½ cup sugar. For apple pie, use 1 cup sugar. Mix with enough apples for a pie. Put apples in crust, pour ½-1 cup apple juice over apples. Put on top crust, crimp, and bake.

• For regular clear jel, use as a thickner. Use ¼ cup clear jel to one quart liquid. Bring liquid to a boil before adding clear jel. Do not over boil.

• For Dutch Gel, use ⅓ cup Dutch Gel, although the amount of fruit, juice, and sugar may vary according to the recipe.

• Do not mix water with instant clear jel. It must be mixed with sugar.

Thanks to Becky Martin, Pen Yan, N.Y., for sending these recipes using instant clear-jel.

Strawberry Freezer Jelly

6 cups strawberries, crushed
6 cups sugar
3 packages Sure-jel or 1 cup Dutch Jel
8 tablespoons instant clear-jel

Mix together 8 tablespoons instant clear-jel with one cup sugar. Be sure the clear-jel is instant. Add berries to the remaining sugar and let set 10 minutes. Mix Sure-jel or Dutch Jel into 2¼ cups water and boil one minute. Pour over berries and stir well. Add sugar with the instant Clear-jel and beat well for three minutes with the mixer to prevent lumpy jelly. Pour into jars and freeze. This makes very good jelly.

Strawberry Pie

1¾ cup sugar
⅓ cup instant clear-jel
1 quart mashed berries (part water)
Strawberry halves
2 baked crusts
Sweetened whipped cream

Mix sugar and instant clear-jel well. Add mashed berries to make a glaze. Fill each crust with ¼ of the glaze mixture. Cover with a layer of strawberry halves and the remaining glaze. Top with cream. Makes delicious fresh berry pies, no cooking involved. Makes 2 pies.

Vanilla Peach Pudding

2 small boxes vanilla pudding (not instant)
1 package unflavored gelatin
1 quart fresh peaches, drained
1 cup sugar
3 tablespoons instant clear-jel

Prepare pudding according to directions on package. Moisten gelatin with water and add to hot pudding. When it sets, add whipped cream topping. Mix the remaining three ingredients and put on top the pudding.

ANSWER — Cathy Blowers requested the recipe for making canned tomato soup that tastes similar to Campbell's soup. Thanks to May Eyster, Hummelstown, for sending a recipe.

Canned Tomato Soup

2 gallons ripe tomatoes, cut up
4 large onions
1 stalk celery (leaves and all)

Cook together slowly. When soft, put through sieve. Add:

2 cups sugar
1 tablespoon salt
½ pound butter
1 cup clear jell or corn starch

Mix with a little water. Bring all the ingredients together to boil. Boil for 15 minutes and can.

ANSWER — Shirley Runk, Mount Union, wanted to know where to find cream of coconut for use in a coconut sour cream cake. Thanks to Kitty Wagner, Mt. Joy, for e-mailing that she buys cream of coconut at the Giant Food Store in E-Town, where it is found in the area where drink mixes and cocktail stirrers are stocked.

ANSWER — Luci Essig, Bernville, wanted recipes for using horseradish in different dishes. She would like to know if horseradish could be used as a meat rub or marinate. Thanks to Phyllis Green, Gettysburg, who writes that years ago her husband brought horseradish and made a salad for a family reunion. Those who liked horseradish liked the dish, but those who didn't like horseradish didn't like the salad. "I guess you need to have a 'taste' for it," Phyllis writes. The recipe is taken from the "Maryland Grange Centennial Cook Book," 1974.

Horseradish Salad

1 package lime Jell-O
1 teaspoon vinegar
½ cup horseradish
1 small can crushed pineapple
½ teaspoon salt
1¾ cup water (use a little more if pineapple is omitted)

Bring water to a boil. Add Jell-O and dissolve. Add remaining ingredients and chill. Good with a meat course.

Broccoli, Cabbage, Cauliflower

tion. Cook in a covered baking dish using waxed paper or plastic wrap covering for 15 minutes, until the egg mixture is set and firm. You can test in your microwave as indicated above. Let stand 3-5 minutes before serving.

Cauliflower with Cheese Sauce
Serves 4

This recipe can be prepared using a whole head of the cauliflower, a more showy presentation for company, or by breaking the head into flowerets in the traditional manner.

1 head cauliflower, about 10 inches across the top
1 cup water
½ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon chopped fresh chervil (optional)
½ teaspoon ground white pepper
1½ cups medium white sauce (see below)
½ cup grated Cheddar or white American cheese
Paprika or chopped fresh chervil for garnish

Trim and wash the cauliflower, breaking it into flowerets if you prefer. Place in a large saucepan with the water, salt, chervil and pepper. Cook over medium heat until tender, about 10 minutes if separated into floweret, 20 minutes if whole. Drain the cauliflower and top with butter pats if you like plain and serve immediately. If you plan to sauce it, heat the white sauce while the cauliflower is cooking, adding the grated cheese and stirring until completely drained. Pour the sauce over the drained cauliflower and sprinkle with paprika or chervil. Serve immediately or place under a preheated broiler until top is golden brown.

Medium White Sauce

3 Tablespoons shortening
3 Tablespoons flour
1½ cups milk
⅜ teaspoon salt
Dash freshly ground pepper

In a 1 quart saucepan, heat the shortening. Gradually add flour, stirring with a whisk, until it becomes a smooth paste. Gradually add the milk, stirring constantly, until thickened. Add salt and pepper and reduce heat to very low. Stir for at least a minute.

Nutty Sweet And Sour Cauliflower
Serves 4

1 large head cauliflower
1 cup water
1 teaspoon salt
2 Tablespoons butter
1 large egg, lightly beaten
2 Tablespoons granulated sugar
¼ teaspoon ground white pepper
3 Tablespoons light brown sugar
2 Tablespoons Dijon mustard
1 Tablespoon cornstarch
⅓ cup cider vinegar (herb or wine vinegar may be substituted)
½ cup milk or evaporated milk
½ cup broken or coarsely chopped walnuts, toasted
Walnut halves for garnish

Trim and wash the cauliflower. Place it in a large saucepan with the water and ½ teaspoon of the salt. Cover and cook over medium heat until tender but crisp, approximately 20 minutes. Meanwhile, melt the butter in a small skillet or saucepan and whisk in the egg, sugar, pepper, salt, brown sugar, mustard, and the remaining salt. Cook over low heat until slightly thickened, about 3 minutes. Dissolve the cornstarch in the vinegar and add to egg mixture, stirring until well blended. Add the milk and stir until thickened and smooth, about 6 minutes. Add the walnuts. Drain the cauliflower and place in heated serving dish. Spoon the sauce over the cauliflower and garnish with walnut halves.

Ida's Notebook

Ida Risser

We've just had a very busy week. In the beginning of the week, we attended the Ephrata Fair to watch our grandson show two of his pigs. They certainly are very different to show than cows or heifers, which you can lead. Pigs ran everywhere.

One day we visited "The Gardens at Conestoga House." It appeared to be a replica of "Longwood Gardens." The many annual, perennial, and tropical plants were spectacular in size and color. There was a rose garden, a pool complex, a water garden, and many terraces. Some of the hanging baskets were enormous. It was well worth the short trip to Lancaster.

That evening there was a pot-luck supper at our church. One can always wish the group was bigger but it does give us an opportunity to learn to know some folks better. Food is always a drawing point it seems.

My high school class had a banquet in the middle of the week. At this point, many of the class members are not able to attend. So, we all signed cards to those who were ill. One member came from Florida, one from New Jersey and one from Maryland. This was our 63rd anniversary so some came with canes and others with walkers, but at least they came.

On Sunday we visited a friend at a new retirement community. We met this lady because she is a reader of "Lancaster Farming" newspaper. She is now 92-years-old and still has a sharp mind. We should all wish to age so well.

Now I must clean my house this week as we are entertaining our "Supper for 8" group this coming Sunday evening. I bought a leg of lamb and my husband bought a ham, so who knows what we'll serve.

Parents Can Help Teens Learn From Car Purchase

When a teen-ager decides it's time to get a first car, parents don't always agree. Instead of relying on a knee-jerk reaction of "yes" or "no," parents can use this situation as a learning experience for their children.

Several issues need to be discussed with the teen. Responsibility is one of them. Money is another. Whether or not the teen really needs an auto or is just responding to peer pressure is another issue.

Sit down with your child and figure out, on paper, how much transportation a week is needed and how much that transportation costs, both in terms of time and money. If, for instance, you are currently driving the teen back and forth to school, to a part-time job, to after-school activities, to social events because other transportation is not available, then perhaps it is time for the young person to get his or her own car.

But if other transport is available — school transportation, car pools, friends with cars — peer pressure, rather than actual need, may be the motivating force. Don't underestimate peer pressure. Social factors can make a car seem very desirable and even necessary.

Next, talk about money. Teens are, at best, young and inexperienced consumers. They may well believe that the only expenses involved in this project are purchase price and gas. Educate them. Buying a car may be, for some teens, their first financial introduction to adulthood.

Begin to estimate the true costs by first considering possible cars the teen-ager plans to buy, including year and make. The young person should have a possible selection of three or four cars, for comparison. Next, try to anticipate, realistically, how much repair and maintenance will cost. Add those expenses to the purchase price.

Get estimates for insurance premiums. The model and year of a car greatly affect insurance costs, so get estimates for several different cars. For instance, a four cylinder is generally less expensive to insure than an eight cylinder.

Now is the time to be certain that teens understand their driving will affect their insurance premiums. Any bad marks on their license will drive up their premiums and keep them in a high-risk pool for years to come, adding greatly to the cost of auto ownership. Young people who have taken a driver education course usually get a discount on their insurance premium.

Financing is another cost the teen must consider, if the car is to be paid for in installments. He or she should ask about car loans at several lenders and compare. If the parents are lending the money, they should have, in writing, the terms of the loan: what the interest rate is, if any, and how and when the loan will be repaid. Don't forget the cost of gas has to be added into monthly expense figures.

If, after adding up all those figures, the young person is still determined to buy a car, help him or her draw up an income and expense sheet, identifying sources of income and expenditures, figuring the car expense into the budget. Buying a car may mean no more meals out, no more designer jeans, and cutting back on money for dates.

It is important for teens to learn that money is limited and purchasing one thing means not getting another.

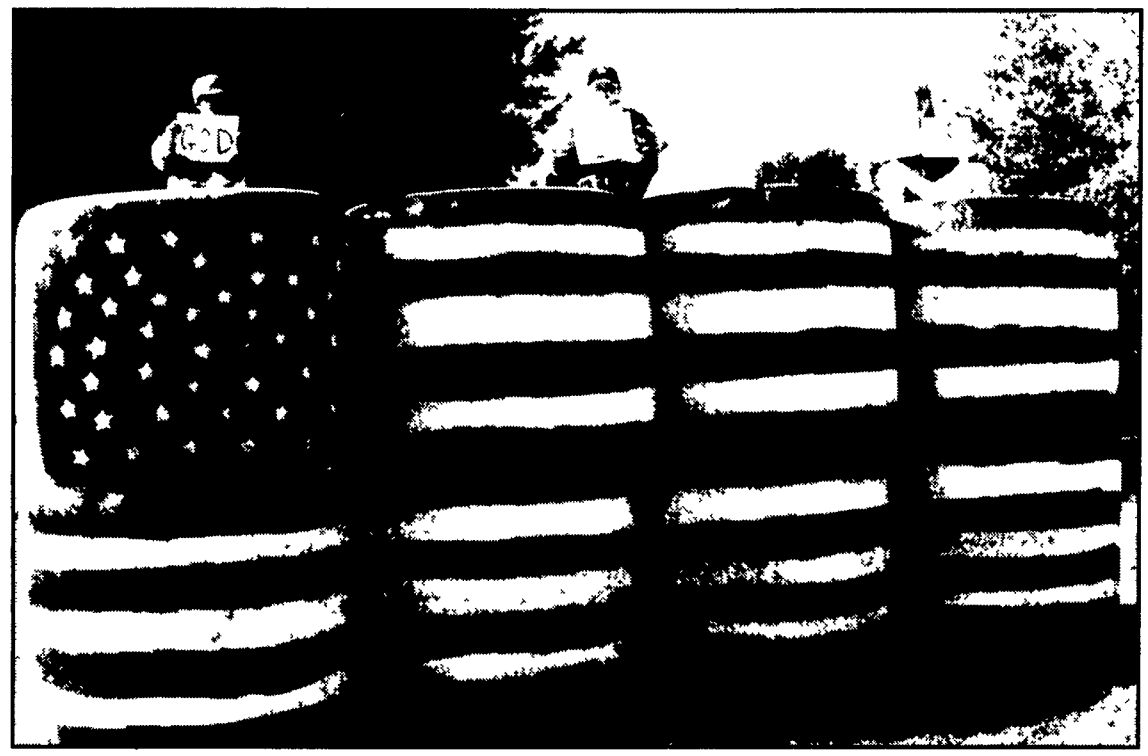
More Than One Way To Raise The Flag



On the Samsel farm on Hunter Road, Oley, this flag proclaims a patriotic message to passerbys. Melvin and Corena Samsel stacked plastic-covered hay bales, rolled on red paint for the strips, and spray painted the stars using a stencil. Sitting atop the flag are the Samsels grandchildren, twins Kayla and Bradley, 11, and neighbor Darrell Smith, 5, son of Trudy and Stan Smith.

At Keystone International Livestock Expo, left, the flag was displayed in a creative way for "Old Glory Farm," Wayland, N.Y. Billy Howe's father, Bill, who has experience in painting cars, taped up the sheep to create the even lines and stars. "It took him about three hours," said his wife Laureen.

Entertainment Attracts Kids Of All Ages During Keystone International Livestock Expo Oct. 2-8

The crowds at the Keystone International Livestock Expo (KILE) found plenty to entertain them from Oct. 2-8. Two acts strolled around the Farm Show Complex. J.J. Huggles, the Goodwill ambassador clown, and "Blaze," the world famous balloon blowing goat. J.J. Huggles puts a smile on every face. He performed his combination of magic, fun, games, and the traditional clown skills. Blaze the Balloon Blowing Goat and the whitty clown named Dr. Happy Laclair amazed and baffled the audience by making fantastic balloon art from balloons inflated by the talking, balloon blowing goat.

Vegetable Contests Expanded At Farm Show

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Attention all gardeners and commercial vegetable growers. The Pennsylvania Farm Show will feature more than 60 different classes for vegetable entries. So save your best vegetables to compete for over $2,900 in premiums available to be awarded for the best Pennsylvania vegetables.

Last year most of the traditional vegetable judging classes at the Pennsylvania Farm Show were eliminated to make room for a full-sized high-tunnel educational exhibit erected in the vegetable room. The Farm Show Commission voted to reinstate many of the traditional vegetable classes for the 2002 Farm Show. In addition, they created separate classes for the many different types of winter squashes.

The market-basket-class, a relatively new addition at the Farm Show was also restored. The commercial packs class, which required a ½ bushel basket of the crop, has been replaced with a field-vegetable division which only requires a bunch or number stated. This will allow home gardeners to compete with commercial producers, whose participation has been very low. Individual classes for the many different types of pumpkins and winter squash have been added along with a greenhouse and high tunnel division.

Only one entry per class is allowed from a farm, family, corporation or firm. Registration is from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. on Thursday, Jan. 3. Entries will be judged on Friday, Jan. 4. For entry blanks and further information, interested persons can contact their local county extension office for a copy of the 2002 Farm Show Premium List or call the Farm Show office at (717) 787-5373.

Pumpkin and Winter Squash

This time of year squash and pumpkins are flowing into local supermarkets, farmer's markets and roadside stands. acorn, carnival, delicata, hubbard and, of course, our own neck pumpkins are in abundance no matter where you look this time of year. Fresh pumpkin can be substituted in any recipe that calls for winter squash and both are packed with Vitamin A and fiber.

Select winter squash and pumpkins for eating that are heavy for their size, have shiny skin and no cracks, bruises or decayed spots. The stem should be attached. Avoid any with a soft spot on the stem end.

Store winter and squash in a cool (50-60 degrees F.) dry area. They will keep for several months if they are mature and the stem is attached. Refrigeration may change the flavor and texture.

Figure about one pound of raw, untrimmed pumpkin or squash for each cup of cooked. A bushel of squash is approximately 40 pounds and yields between 16 and 20 quarts of canned squash. An average of 16 pounds of squash is needed for a canner load of quarts.

To can, wash winter squash or pumpkin, remove seeds and cut into 1-inch wide slices and peel. Cut flesh into 1-inch cubes. Boil 2 minutes in water.

Caution: Do not mash or puree (pureeing makes the product too dense for canning at home). Fill jars with cubes and cooking liquid, leaving 1-inch headspace. Adjust lids and process in a pressure canner. At 0-2000 feet altitude, process pints for 55 minutes and quarts for 90 minutes in a dial gauge pressure canner at 11 pounds of pressure. In a weighted gauge pressure canner process at 10 pounds of pressure, 55 minutes for pints, and 90 minutes for quarts. To use, drain jars and strain or sieve cubes.

To freeze, wash outside before cutting. Remove rind and boil or steam, roast or microwave cubes of the flesh until fork tender. Drain cooked pumpkin in a colander in the refrigerator for several hours or overnight. Reserve the liquid for soup. Process drained cubes in a food processor, food mill or mash with a potato masker to make puree. Measure in one cup portions and place in rigid freezer containers or freezer bags. Freeze for up to one year. Puree can be used in recipes calling for the same amount of solid pack canned pumpkin. Do not freeze raw winter squash or pumpkin.

Can you use the Jack-O-Lantern pumpkins to make pie? The best selections for eating and pies are small "pie pumpkins" or "sweet pumpkins," butternut, or neck pumpkins, which contain less water and have sweeter flesh. The flesh is often stringy in a large pumpkin, although it will not hurt you.

Any hints for cutting through the thick rind of a pumpkin or squash? One method is to microwave the squash for 1 minute, remove and then cut. Be careful, the squash will be hot.

How do you roast pumpkin seeds? Wash seeds well. Spread in a single layer on a baking sheet to dry. Roast for 20-30 minutes at 375 degrees F. Dot with butter and brown for 5-10 minutes at 400 degrees F. Stir often until toasted. Sprinkle with salt, cool and serve.

For additional information on pumpkin and winter squash contact your local Cooperative Extension office and ask for the Enjoy Five-a-Day Variety Squash and Pumpkin publication.

If you have food preservation questions, a home economist is available to answer questions on Wednesdays 9:00 am- 1:00 pm, call (717) 394-6851 or write Penn State Cooperative Extension, Lancaster County, 1383 Arcadia Rd. Rm. 1, Lancaster, PA 17601.

Donough, Gerhart, Peters Show New Holland Sheep Champions

LOU ANN GOOD
Food And Family Features Editor

NEW HOLLAND (Lancaster Co.) — "As judge I must consider the breeder, the market, and the consumer," Clyde Brubaker, Robesonia sheep breeder, said of his criteria for determining market lamb champions.

"Many consumers don't know what a good leg of lamb tastes like. We must present something that is tasty, lean, and of good quality. At the same time, the butcher wants a couple of bucks for his work. A market lamb must exemplify lots of quality and red meat."

The lamb meeting Brubaker's criteria was a homebred middleweight named by Joelynn Donough, Manheim.

"Mac is my little darling, friendly, and sweet," Joelynn said. "I was planning to save him for the Pennsylvania Farm Show, but was afraid he'd get too big."

She also feared he'd be too little for New Holland's competition. But the middleweight champ's outstanding qualities were more impressive to Brubaker than the heavyweight contenders.

The Donoughs raised about 50 head on their Manheim farm. Joelynn's been out with the sheep since her toddler days and has been showing "practically all my life," she said. "I love sheep and showing so much. It's my thing."

Andrew Gerhart, Reinholds, showed a homebred market lamb to take reserve champion market lamb honors. Andrew, 14, said Chip is one of 40-50 head he has working on to improve his flock. Andrew, Cathy's mother, said the buck used to produce the reserve champion is really wild, but she can forgive him for the great offspring.

Andrew also showed the champion non-sale lamb. He plans to put the non-sale lamb back in the flock.

Radell Peters, Elizabethtown, showed the reserve champion non-sale, but it was his Dorset ewe that took the spotlight during Thursday evening's competition. After winning the Dorset class in both ewe and ram divisions, the ewe went on to be named grand champion of all breeds.

As market lamb champions, judge Clyde Brubaker selects Joelynn Donough's purebred as champion, center, and Andrew Gerhart's Suffolk crossbred as reserve.

The non-sale grand champion lamb is shown by Andrew Gerhart, right, and the reserve by Radell Peters. Clyde Brubaker judged the event.

In other breeding sheep competition, the reserve grand champion over all breeds went to Jen Zimmerman's Southdown ewe. Jen's flock is repeatedly in top spots throughout county competitions.

In breed competitions, the champion Cheviot ewe and ram were shown by Jim Zimmerman, Reinholds. The champion Dorset ram and ewe were shown by Radell Peters, Elizabethtown. Champion Romney ram and ewe was shown by Alex Lauffler, New Holland. The Southdown champion ram and ewe by Jen Zimmerman. The champion Suffolk ram and ewe by Andrew Gerhart, Reinholds.

Showmanship included four divisions. Senior showman champion was Sarah Boyd; 4-7 years experience, Jim Zimmerman; 2-3 years experience, Jen Hughes; and first year, Brandon Price.

Media Tour Touts Dairy Benefits

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — The Pennsylvania Dairy Promotion Program is continually building strong relationships with media so consumers are blanketed with good news about dairy.

Twice a year PDPP hits the airwaves in a two-week media blitz providing positive dairy messages to consumers. The most recent media initiative informed consumers about the nutritional value, quality, convenience and great taste of dairy products. The tour resulted in more than 100 radio, television and newspaper interviews during September.

Registered dietitians from PDPP and the American Dairy Association & Dairy Council Mid East served as spokespersons for the media interviews, which provided the opportunity to highlight the nutritional value of dairy foods. Dairy promotion checkoff programs are managed effectively and efficiently, which allows for credible, science-based information to be distributed. It also positions the dairy promotion checkoff program as the leading source for accurate and valid nutrition facts when breaking issues hit.

The dairy checkoff program also practices good media relations on an on-going basis and provides accurate and dairy-friendly information related to calcium, osteoporosis, lactose intolerance, high blood pressure and children's nutrition topics via news alerts and press kits.

Protecting and defending the dairy industry remains a top priority for PDPP and ADADC Mid East. Checkoff spokespersons have been trained to respond proactively to potential issues that may threaten the dairy industry. When dairy farmers are milking, they can be rest assured that the checkoff program is working on their behalf.

store (Jefferson County) and a chain of Guernsey Maid Restaurants. In 1973, the Hardings' barn burned, taking with it all the hay and most of the farm equipment. Gene designed a fireproof barn with concrete floors and supports and a roof made of steel to erect on the base, but before the barn was completed, Eugene died in a traffic accident.

"Life hands you what it does and you must deal with it and just go on," Jan said.

At the time of her husband's death, the oldest of the couple's five children was only 16 years old. The whole family rallied to carry on the duties of farm, store, and restaurant. Jan also wanted her children to be able to participate in school activities, and she was concerned that they would become overwhelmed by the responsibilities of continuing the operation. After several years of struggling to keep everything running smoothly, the Harding's reluctantly sold the farm, store, and restaurants.

"I needed to find a job," Jan said. By that time, she was firmly entrenched in many agriculture related organizations. Perhaps most notable was that she was the first woman elected to the National Guernsey Board. With her strong background in promotion and working with youth, Jan's perspective was highly valued among the male-dominated board who excelled in production but were only becoming aware of the need for promotion.

Jan's son Jeff first noticed the PPDPS ad for a director and encouraged his mother to apply.

The dairy princess program had undergone dramatic changes since its inception in 1956. Leadership for the program had often shifted among several organizations, and sometimes limped along. By 1983, the rules and regulations for PPDPS had been established to include the involvement of many ag-related associations, but someone was needed to pull it all together.

During retirement, Jan looks forward to spending more time with her grandchildren, who live in several different states.

Jan Harding was the perfect person to be named executive director. With her strong background in promotion, her experience in working with youth, and her firm belief that promotion is best done at the grassroots' level, Jan turned PPDPS into what Nichol calls "one of the best programs in the state."

Under Jan's direction, the biggest change was to include dairy maids and ambassadors in dairy promotion. This year, 342 dairy promoters worked with 47 county committees to present a unified message to the public — Pennsylvania's Official Beverage — milk — contains nine essential nutrients to keep the body happy."

"Dairy promoters are the nucleus of the dairy program," said Jan. She has guided PPDPS into utilizing dairy promoters in school presentations to convince students of the importance of drinking milk for healthy lives.

Jan's influence and the positive results of convincing so many consumers at the grassroots level has been recognized by many different agriculture organizations.

Jim Trotter, business manager for the Pennsylvania Guernsey Association, said, "Jan was very instrumental in promoting the Guernsey breed. Everyone knows her. She has been helpful to many youth and the state as a whole."

Among many awards that organizations have bestowed upon Jan are being elected to the Golden Guernsey Walk of Fame, being named Distinguished Dairy Woman of the Year by the Pennsylvania Dairymen's Association, and awards for 17 years of service as president of her local school board.

One of Jan's favorite pastimes is to accompany her grandchildren to shows where she helps with behind-the-scenes duties. With her are the children of Jan's oldest son Jeff and his wife Cindy, who operate Hess Farm, a seventh generation family farm in Boalsburg. Andy, 11; Luke, 13; and Zach, 14, say they like to ride their Tennessee Walker horses with their grandmother.

Jan's promotion has expanded to include all breeds. She said, "A good cow in any breed is a good cow."

After 17 years, Jan believes PPDPS would benefit from some new blood in the leadership. She said, "I believe PDPPS is in excellent hands with Junia Isiminger as the executive director. PDPPS has a strong board of coordinators who have worked many years to make the program what it is today."

She said, "I want to stay as involved as possible. I'll help out wherever needed."

The dairy industry continues to be dear to Jan's heart and she is thrilled to see several of her children and grandchildren participating in livestock events. "I love helping them (family members) prepare the animals for showing, and hope to have more time now that I'm retiring," Jan said.

A year after Jan began working with PPDPS, she had married Charles Ruslavage, a Clarion University professor and football coach and widower with six children.

Today, the couple have 17 grandchildren scattered in several states. The couple plans to travel the U.S. and spend several weeks with grandchildren.

On Sunday, Oct. 14, a retirement gathering honoring Jan's contributions to the dairy industry is scheduled at the Ag Progress site in the special events building, at a drop in from 1 p.m.-4 p.m. The gathering is for everyone whose life has been touched through Jan's dedication.

"I've loved every minute," Jan said of her involvement in PPDPS. "I'm stepping down not because I'm tired of it, but for the good of the organization."

Her attitude confirms Nichol's comment: "Jan is a class act."

Poland Grapples With Joining European Union

LOU ANN GOOD
Food And Family Features Editor

ZLOTOW, Poland — In the first fews days of visiting Poland, I often heard the phrase, "When we join the European Union...."

These phrases were often affiliated with the time and problems needed to overcome differences between current EU members and themselves. As far as I can determine, many Polish believe it is necessary to join the EU for stronger trade advantages. At the same time, they are fearful of possible repercussions of joining the EU.

Poland has suffered much in past relationships with Germany and some of its other neighbors. Polish believe they have always been treated as second-class citizens and have been taken advantage of again and again.

They say the standards the EU is trying to impose on them are unfair. At the same time, Poland needs to expand its markets because it produces more fruits and vegetables than they have markets. They cannot sell to EU unless they become members. If they become members, it gives these countries the right to come in and buy land. Because Poland's land is cheaper than that in Germany and France, the Polish fear their land would be snatched up and they would no longer be independent. Poland wants to require an 18-year wait until Polish farmers have a chance to become more financially independent.

Poland, more than most countries because of what they have suffered, value independence. They don't want to get into a situation where they need to rely upon other countries.

Many of the ODR advisers say that the sooner Poland becomes a member of the EU, the better for Poland. But others are not so sure.

Dr. Czeslaw Nowak of the Agricultural University of Krakow, believes Poland needs to find a different way, separate from the EU and different from America.

"We don't know what will be good for us in the future. We don't want to be told to follow someone else," Czeslaw said.

Their situation is unique, Czeslaw said. He explained that Poland spends 31 percent of their income on food compared with the EU that spends 16 percent and the U.S. that spends 10.3 percent.

He believes that the U.S. has a better system of allowing trade in that producers are only required to label exactly what is included in a product. Although the EU is critical of U.S. agriculture, Nowak believes that by the year 2006, the EU will move in the same direction as U.S. policies.

Since Poland became independent, entrepreneurships have flourished. Many of these businesses are skeptical of the benefits of becoming part of the EU.

The owner of a large flouring beverage processing company said, "EU is more like Communism. They tell you what you can produce and how much. I believe U.S. capitalism is better and more open."

The current members of the EU are also skeptical of allowing Poland to become a member. They fear that Polish workers will work for cheaper wages and that would destroy their labor markets. They know Poland can produce food more cheaply. Although the EU needs some of Poland's food production, it could also destroy some of EU's markets.

The EU requires Polish farmers to come up to standards in milk processing. This requires a big investment because the average Polish farmer has only three cows. It is not economically productive to purchase refrigeration and equipment. So farmers are being encouraged to borrow money to expand their operation.

Poland said that they have met the requirements the EU requested of other countries to become part of the EU but the promised implementation of the program continues to be postponed. Crezlaw said that the postponement may be the result of Europe combating FMD and BSE and draining their financial resources. Poland has been free of both of these diseases.

At one host family that I stayed with, the man established a prospering business purchasing vegetables and fruits from local farmers and selling them in the Czech Republic. He, too, is skeptical of becoming a member of the EU.

He said, "Germany thinks their food is better than ours. They want to dump their excess on us but won't want to purchase our products."

We visited another export business where produce was being exported to the Ukraine, Lithaniuia, Netherlands, Belgium, and Russia.

Team member Kathryn Wentzel listens as Czeslaw Novak, agriculture professor, talks about Poland's future. He said, "Poland is on a bumpy road in good direction."

This export business advised farmers on what to plant and the methods of growing.

The export owner said that Polish quality of produce is equal to other members of the EU, but the EU has more advanced harvesting methods and marketing logistics.

The majority of Polish we have spoken with have expressed that organic vegetables and fruits is the direction Poland needs to go. However, organically grown produce costs twice as much and is not as eye-appealing. Since Polish people pride themselves in top-quality appearing fruits and vegetables, some Americans question how successful they will be in switching to organic produce.

ODRs encourage organic farming methods. They offer special programs for farmers. Although this is a big push, less than one percent of Polish farmers are certified organic.

On the other hand, Polish farmers use substantially less pesticides than either the U.S. and other European nations.

Dairy Commercials Target Hispanic Population

SYRACUSE, N.Y. — New commercials, billboards, and store promotions are just a few of the many promotional efforts The American Dairy Association and Dairy Council, Inc. is doing to promote milk to New York and New Jersey's Hispanic population.

The Hispanic market is the fastest growing segment of the U.S. population, and Hispanics on average consume more milk per capita than other consumers. ADADC is targeting the New York City Metro area because it is second only to Los Angeles in terms of growth in the Hispanic population. Hispanics account for about 19 percent of the population in the Metro New York area.

"ADADC has been developing specialized advertising campaigns for the Hispanic population for more than 10 years," says Michele Martens, vice president of marketing for ADADC. "We were one of the first milk promotions group to recognize the importance of this population and are among only a handful to aggressively market to it."

This summer for example, ADADC not only reached the Hispanic population with store promotions and billboards, they are also running a commercial for milk-based smoothies on Hispanic television using the latest digital computer animation technology. The mixed fruit smoothie campaign is using a contemporary look with a cutting-edge twist under the "Leche Magica" or "The Magic of Milk" theme.

Collecting Coverlets:

History Woven Into Homemade Bedspreads

MICHELLE KUNJAPPU
Lancaster Farming Staff

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — "Art is gained by great labour and intensity."

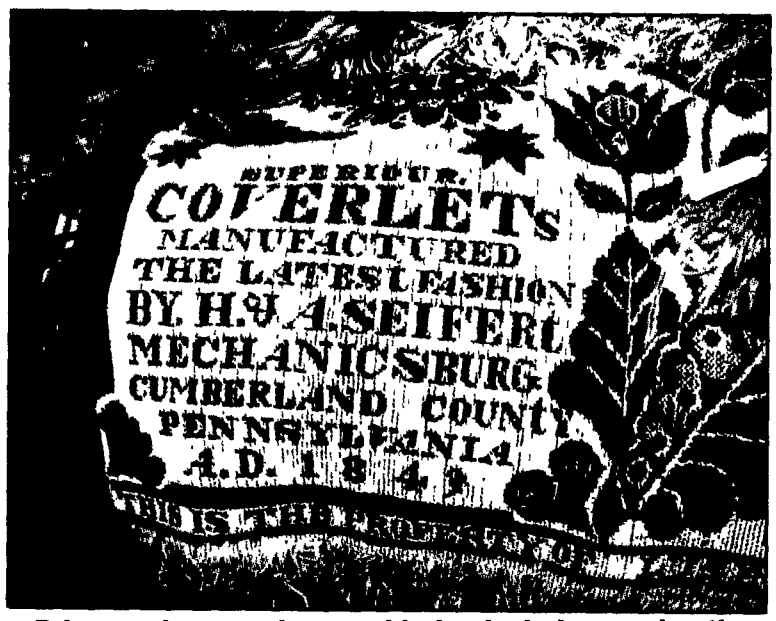
These words, penned around the 1840's by Montgomery County weaver James Taggert, succinctly capture the mindset of the 18th century weavers who created the colorfully-patterned coverlets so prized today.

Patricia "Trish" Herr and her husband, Don, both practicing small-animal veterinarians, collect not only hand-woven coverlets but also other historic pieces.

Most of their collection, which features pieces such as painted furniture, baskets, stitched samplers, and folk art, has origins in the southeastern area of Pennsylvania. Don also owns an extensive collection of pewter pieces. They attend and sell antiques at several shows in the Philadelphia, Lancaster, and York areas.

Herr is the author or co-author of four books about textiles. She has in the past, and is currently serving on several boards at local museums.

Coverlet designs also paid tribute to the importance of agriculture.



Print on the coverlets could also include an advertisement, said Herr, such as this piece with the words, "Coverlets manufactured, the latest fashion by H.A. Seife, Mechanicsburg, Cumberland county, Pennsylva i A. D. **.

Patriotic phrases, eagles, or stars are often found woven into coverlet designs.

Learning About Textiles

Attending sales in the area "started me on textiles," said Herr. A former 4-H sewing club member, Herr grew up in upstate New York. She also raised and exhibited sheep, another factor which gave her a background in needlework.

Herr professes to have "grown" into her interest. "I was fascinated with coverlets because people didn't seem to know too much about who made them or the different weaves. I needed to go out and do my own research."

Her self-education led her to curate an exhibit in a Lancaster museum that featured coverlets and quilts, another area which Herr has educated herself about.

Coverlets can be identified as such because the design changes around the edges of the spread. If the piece has the same pattern throughout, it is considered a blanket, said Herr.

The bedspreads often feature several bright colors. The most common, said Herr, is "madden," a brown-red made from a root; "Cochineal," a bright red made from beetles and imported from Central America; greens from plant materials; and indigo imported from India.

Pattern books, with their intricate grid diagrams that detail shaft and tie up placement, look startlingly similar to a musical score. Even in museums, said Herr, the manuscripts have been mistakenly filed away as a musical arrangements. The Herrs are gathering the manuscripts to help modern-day weavers reproduce the old patterns.

The coverlets have survived, said Herr, intact and in good shape because the coverlets were often presentation pieces for marriage or given at a special event. These coverlets, which may feature names and dates, stitched into the fabric, may not have been used.

A Professional Occupation

"Lancaster was really probably one of the most concentrated counties for weavers," she said. "People think of it as women's work but they were made primarily by professional men," she said. The first German immigrants were professional "stocking weavers" who moved into Germantown, Philadelphia in 1683. Weaving was a European guild profession.

Many of the weavers who immigrated to the U.S. in the late 18th and early 19th centuries came because of religious or economic reasons. Once they were here in America, they transferred the craft from the father to the son, said Herr. "It could be a family project. The father directed the process but it was definitely a professional career," she said.

Trish Herr has been educating herself, collecting, and selling coverlets for 30 years.

Although women did do a little weaving, production weaving was primarily a man's career.

"The coverlets that people are most familiar with are, for the most part, made by weavers who went through a guild system in Europe. They were mainly professional men," she said.

The tradition of home weaving was alive, however, in the Northeast and the South, where women would weave on simpler looms and dye their own materials, according to Herr.

A Change In Materials

"Eventually, as we got to the mid-century, we see the industrial revolution in New England. Mills changed as cotton fiber became available. Women were able to buy cheap cotton goods and make quilts. By the end of the 19th century the men, if they are still weaving, the men are weaving carpet," she said.

In the early 1800's the more

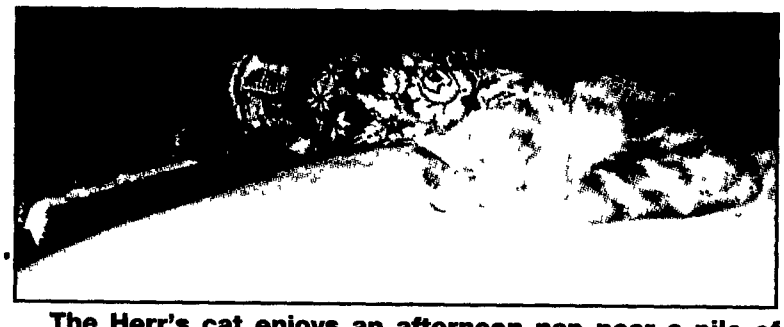
The Herrs recently acquired a private collection of quilts.



The Herr's cat enjoys an afternoon nap near a pile of coverlets. Coverlets could be single- or double-weave, so the various weights made them useful much of the year for bed coverings.

American Folk Art Portraits Remain A Collector Favorite

There's nothing like an 18th or 19th century portrait, supposedly of an ancestor, for status.

With the revival of interest in early American objects and art at the Philadelphia 1876 Centennial, literally thousands of "Colonial ancestor portraits" were manufactured in oil and watercolors. There were in the naive style that we now refer to as folk art paintings. Usually they were unsigned. These were done in the 18th century by itinerant folk artists traveling in the colonies. The portraits were considered status symbols in those days by the upper and merchant classes. These untrained artists created their own stylistic techniques that have helped identify many unsigned portrait artists.

One big difference in formal portrait and folk portraits is the concentration on faces.

Bodies, arms, and hands seem misshapen in the folk portraits. Backgrounds were for the most part draperies, window-framed landscapes or solid colors.

Several things determine the value of a folk portrait; attribution to a known artist such as Joseph H. Davies or William Matthew Prior and the celebrity of the subject.

A perfect example was the recent sale at Skinner Galleries of an unsigned portrait of a wealthy merchant. It was attributed to artist Asahel Lynde Powers (1813-1843) because of the style of lettering on the back, similar to that of signed pieces. The oil on poplar panel sold way over estimate for $57,500.

The quality of the artist's work is another factor. Often works by the same artists aren't always distinguished, and can be worth a fraction of choice pieces.

Children's portraits are always in demand. At the same Skinner's sale, a charming portrait of a standing child holding grapes was estimated between $800-$1,200. It sold for $2,530. When an animal such as a cat or dog are included in the portrait with a child, it adds to the value as do children's furniture and toys. More than one portrait in the painting also makes it more valuable.

Folk artists used many mediums including oils on canvas, watercolors and pastels. Prior even did some on cardboard. Other times portraits were done on glass and ivory.

Clues: This is a category where it is sometimes better to have an unsigned painting. Serious collectors should obtain a written guarantee of authenticity when an expensive purchase is made. Since folk painters included every defect in their subjects from warts to crossed-eyes, many of these paintings have been "touched up" to fetch a better price. Not all paintings when signed, were on the front. Check the stretchers and the back of the painting.

Antique Detective

In the 1970s when folk art portraits reached new high prices, many fakes were made in the manner of Prior and others. It was very easy to reproduce the cracking of oil paint aging. There were even special "crackling" varnishes. Other times cracks may simply be painted on in a dark color with a very fine brush, pen or the surface may be scratched to simulate cracking.

Signatures are often added to an old painting. To tell if it is new, check the surface in the light of an ultraviolet lamp. New paint fluoresces quite clearly. This is a good way to tell if animals have been added or if those crossed eyes have been removed. All the more reason to have a written guarantee by the seller.

Gradually portraits by traveling folk artists all but disappeared with the advent of the daguerreotypes in the 1840s. Instead, it was only the professionally trained artist who was commissioned to paint the very wealthy.

Coverlets

labor-intensive linen and wool began to be replaced by cotton. Linen took "a good part of the year," according to Herr, to grow the hemp, harvest it, and deteriorate the plant in a stream or pond. In the winter months the women combed and spun the fiber from strands into usable thread. However rural areas did continue to use linens for bed linens well through the 1800's.

"It got to a point that it was cheaper and easier to buy manufactured stuff. By that mid-century point or even earlier weavers were using larger, water-powered looms," said Herr.

Prior to the introduction of the larger looms, the typical width of a coverlet section was 36 inches — a full arm span — since the shuttle was thrown through the warp with each hand. A full coverlet was composed of two pieces stitched together.

Moving the warp threads up or down made the coverlet's patterns. Coverlet designs changed forever with the introduction of the Jacquard attachment, a card with punched holes to program each warp thread for flower, bird, or tree patterns. "Before that, they used treadles and did a more geometric pattern," she said.

The spreads could be purchased for $1.50 to $2.00, depending on the amount of material used or if the customer brought their own material. A customer who had spun and possibly dyed the material would pay $.50 less. Now the coverlets, which the Herrs purchase at antique shows, private collectors, or public auctions, can fetch from a few hundred to several thousand dollars.

A coverlet order would take only a few days, said Herr. "They may have taken a few days to set on the loom, said Herr, but the actual weaving could be done in a day or two."

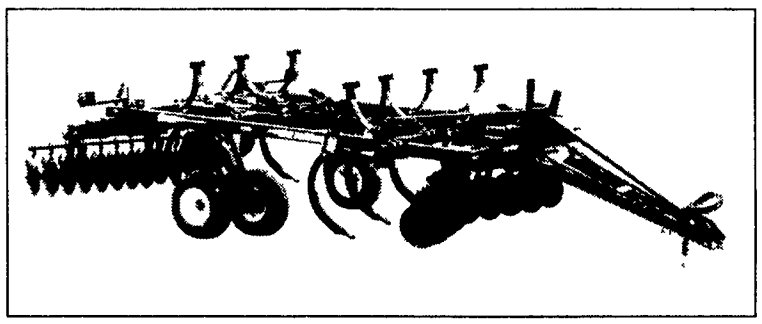
❖ BUSINESS NEWS ❖



The 720 model of the Land Commander II uses a new shank spacing; four shanks in the front and three in the back, spaced at 20 inches for improved breakout in clay and gumbo soils. The 720 model also has lower horsepower requirements than models with wider spacing.

Brillion Adds New Model To Land Commander II Lineup

BRILLION, Wis. — A versatile tillage tool for all conditions and residue requirements just went one better. Brillion has added a new 720 model to the "Built Brillion Tough" Land Commander II lineup that includes some of the most productive and efficient tillage equipment available today.

"The 20-inch spacing on the seven-shank machine provides improved breakout for producers in medium to heavy soil types," explained Gary Wallander, product support coordinator for Brillion Iron Works. "Actual field operation has shown that horsepower requirements for this model are less than models with wider shank spacings."

The time-tested auto-reset shank assemblies on the 720 model Land Commander II are mounted with four shanks on the front rank and three shanks on the rear rank for a true 20-inch spacing. "This shank configuration does an excellent job in heavy soil types," Wallander says. "It works the clay and gumbo soils better, making for a smooth and uniform seedbed."

The standard Land Commander II with 15-, 24-, or 30-inch spacings still is available in sizes from three to 13 shanks. The new model 720 adds an intermediate size machine that is extremely versatile, efficient, and productive.

The Land Commander II series works for the producer both spring and fall. The adjustable front disc gangs cut and size the residue. The auto-reset shanks, with 20 inches of trip height, break up the compaction layers for optimum water transfer and root penetration. Spring-cushioned rear disk gangs break up the clods, mix the residue and level the fields without ridging. The independently adjustable disk gangs can be set at angles of 10, 15 and 20 degrees to tailor the 720 Land Commander II to a variety of tillage and residue requirements.

Agway Establishes Certified Bagged Feeds Specialist Program

SHIPPENSBURG (Cumberland Co.) — With an increasing number of feeds now available and a growing trend towards specialized feed products, consumers have more questions about which feeds are right for their animals. To help consumers, Agway Bagged Feeds is now offering a certification program for its dealers and their employees.

The one-day training seminars, which will be held at three locations in the Northeast in October, will provide participants with product knowledge for all of Agway's bagged feeds. All aspects of feeds will be covered - from specialty milk replacers to milling information to animal health. Every topic is designed to provide the dealers and salespeople with knowledge that they can use when working with customers..

Participants will be required to pass a take-home qualifying test based on the seminar information. Those who pass the test will receive the "Certified Bagged Feeds Specialist" designation. They will receive a certificate and two shirts with the Specialist logo. A news release announcing their certification will also be sent to the local media.

The three training seminars are scheduled for Liverpool, N.Y. on Oct. 11, Manchester, N.H. on Oct. 24, and Grantville, PA on Oct. 30. For more information, call Agway Marketing Services at (800) 254-2258.

Land Pride Introduces Core Aerators

SALINA, Kan. — Land Pride Core Aerators, CA25 Series, help reduce compaction in heavy soil conditions. Available in 4-foot, 5-foot, and 6-foot units, these aerators feature case hardened ¾-inch spoons to penetrate the ground to a depth of 4½ inches, depending on soil conditions and additional weight needed.

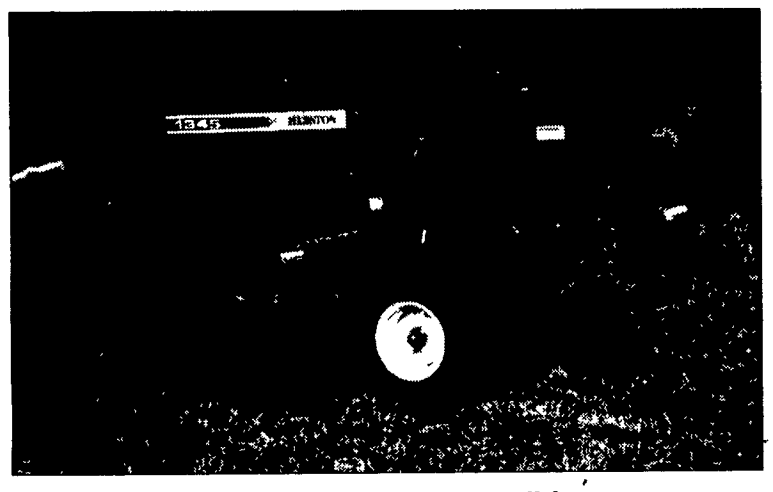
A core is pulled every seven inches of forward travel from each of the spoon gangs. Each gang is mounted independently, which minimizes torque on the spoons during slight turns.

Storage stands are located on all four corners for added stability and ease of hook up to the tractor. Water tanks are optional on five-foot and six-foot models to safely and easily add weight to aid in spoon penetration.

Hesston Introduces New Mid-Size, Center-Pivot, Disc Mower Conditioner

ATLANTA, Ga. — The new 12-foot (3.7-meter) Hesston 1345 center-pivot, pull-type, disc mower conditioners (DMC) feature a choice of three unique crimp rollers for a wide variety of crops and conditions, a new turbulence-reduction roll for better performance, a unique swivel-hitch option, and improved reliability and servicing ease.

"The 1345 disc mower conditioner can easily cut through a wider variety of crops — including wet, tangled mixed hay — and at higher speeds than any sickle windrower," reports Eric Raby, Hesston general marketing manager. "With its center-pivot design and optional swivel hitch, the 1345 is unsurpassed for making short, clean work of your most irregular fields. Narrow roads and gates, and cramped storage space are no problem, either, thanks to an overall width of only 12.5 feet (3.8 meters)."



Hesston 1345 disc mower conditioner.

Cutting is handled by eight counter-rotating discs, with two, swingaway, reversible knives per disc, turning at 2,600 rpm for a knife tip speed of 184 mph (296 kph). A modular spur-gear design permits each gear assembly and adjacent idler gear to be individually removed and serviced to save time and expense. Cutting height can be set as close as 1.3 inches (32 millimeters), as a result of Hesston's gear-to-gear drive and modular design. To reduce the air turbulence that can hurt performance in light crops, the conditioner rolls have been moved rearward and a turbulence-reduction roll inserted between the cutterbed and conditioner rolls.

This improves cutoff in short and light crops, without impacting capacity in heavy crops.

The standard conditioner rolls are Hesston's unique rubber-on-steel, fully engaged, intermeshing 110-inch (2.8-meter) rolls. They are designed to crimp, rather than crush, the crop so that plants lose moisture without losing leaves and structural integrity. Optional rolls include Hesston's unique TiCor™, shallow-lugged, intermeshing rolls constructed of reinforced rubber, and steel-on-steel rolls. The rolls are mounted to the header, rather than the frame, to ensure optimum feeding and conditioning. Crop discharge width is adjustable from 36 to 106 inches (0.9 to 2.7 meters). To quickly eject slugs, a unique eccentric linkage allows the rolls to temporarily separate, then reset automatically.

For 90-degree, and sharper, turns without driveline chatter or damage, a unique swivel hitch is available as an option. The hitch attaches directly to the drawbar, not the three-point hitch, making hookup quicker and easier. In addition, an exclusive new frame supports the twin gearboxes from both ends and pulls the machine without putting any load or stress on the twin gearboxes for improved seal life and overall reliability. Other options include high skid shoes, and hydraulic header tilt.

GVM, Inc. Celebrates 25 Years In Business

BIGLERVILLE (Adams Co.) — GVM Incorporated is celebrating its 25th year in the design and manufacturing of agricultural spraying and spreading equipment. Mark Anderson, the president of GVM said "We are still going strong after 25 years."

GVM has recently introduced its newest product, the Predator. The Predator complements the line of self-propelled Prowler sprayers and double duty spreaders. In addition, the company also manufacturers a complete line of pull type spreaders and pick up sprayers.

Initially, GVM sold only boom kits and foam marking systems. Now it has a state-of-the-art manufacturing plant, as well as the full-time operation of three facilities located in Biglerville; Bellevue, Ohio; and Claremont, Illinois.

QuikAdjust Residue Managers Save Time

COLCHESTER, Ill. — Yetter announces its new QuikAdjust for residue managers, which makes setting and changing the depth of residue managers almost effortless.

Instead of crawling under each row unit on the planter to pull a pin to make the depth adjustment, the QuikAdjust allows the operator to stand alongside the planter and simply pull the spring-loaded handle that extends above the planter row unit's parallel linkage. A lever is then used to raise or lower the residue wheels to the proper height, and the handle is released into the corresponding hole.

Holes are set at 3/16" increments for precise height adjustment. Quick, consistent depth adjustment for each row is not only possible, but easy. When even faster adjustments are required, the QuikAdjust's double-time adjusting speed adapts to the situation.

"Over the course of a season, this innovation can cut planting time by hours," says Susan Wherley, advertising manager for Yetter. "And time is money."

"Proper depth adjustment is critical for successful residue management," Wherley adds. "If the residue manager is set too low, it will move soil to the middle of the row, which discourages precise seed placement and creates a trench in which a heavy rain can wash everything away. If it's set too high, it won't move the residue, and wicking and hairpinning can result."

West Lampeter Hog Show Draws 16 FFA, 22 4-H Participants

MICHELLE KUNJAPPU
Lancaster Farming Staff

LAMPETER (Lancaster Co.) — "You can see the leanness, muscling, soundness and length of body on these hogs out here," said judge Holloway. "There's just one pig that's more special." Michael Dyer's hog won that "special" distinction and grand champion honors.

Michael, 14, a freshman at Penn Manor High School, was a junior FFA member and is now a high school FFA member. He has three years of show ring experience.

Michael was introduced to swine by an uncle who exhibited the animals. "I've always wanted to show them," he said. Although he lives in a development, Michael houses his hogs at a neighbor's farm.

He raised three hogs this year and will sell all three at West Lampeter Fair's Friday evening sale. Next year he plans to get another three hogs and add to his competition list by participating at Solanco Fair and the Farm Show.

He is the son of Ray and Corinne Dyer, Lancaster. His younger brother, Joshua, shows swine for 4-H and took home champion lightweight placing.

Michael picked the hog out of a litter. His brother showed a gilt from the same litter. "I got him later than the rest of them (his other two hogs). He was 20 pounds bigger so I cut him back. As the summer progressed he got bigger and a week and a half ago he was overweight," said Michael. An emergency exercise plan, which Michael did with the pig every day, brought the animal back to competition specifications.

In the 4-H division 22 4-H'ers exhibited 44 hogs. The grand champion winner came out of an especially competitive heavyweight class. "This pig really levels out and presents itself well," said Holloway. "I like it as far as balance."

Linford Hershey, 14, an eighth grader at Dayspring Christian Academy, took home grand champion honors in the 4-H division with his Blue Butt hog.

He got his hog, one of four 4-H hogs that he raised, at an April club sale at Solanco Fairgrounds. He is the son of Les and Lois Hershey, White Rock · Farm, Kirkwood.

The Hersheys operate a beef farm and feed 350 head per year. The only hogs that are on the farm are 4-H projects. This year Linford also showed two dairy beef calves. In addition to his livestock projects Linford also did small engines, rocketry, and strawberry 4-H projects.

4-H is an organization the whole Hershey family participates in. Linford's older brother, Loren, 16, exhibits hogs, lambs, and beef as projects. Loren took home a first place in the swine show's senior showmanship class. The family took their 4-H projects to Solanco show and plans to compete at New Holland's upcoming fair.

All four Hershey children: Loren, Linford, Lisa, 11, and Luke, 8, competed in the heavyweight class. All four also participated in the showmanship classes. The family brought five hogs to the fair.

Dave Holloway, Glen Rock, a Duroc breeder, judged the show. He was especially complimentary about the showmanship abilities exhibited by the FFA and 4-Hers. "Every year I come here and I really feel that is the organization, the school, the young people, and the family — you put that together and you can't fail. Each and every one of them knows what they're doing," he said.

Holloway noted that he has judged in five states this year but has not come across the consistent quality of the showmanship skills exhibited at this show.

In addition to having hogs all of his life, he has been in the purebred business since 1978. He has served on the Duroc board several times and has exhibited hogs on the national level.

"I appreciate the young people that show livestock and the families who make sure that the young people get the chance to work with animals. It takes as a while family. These shows are something that families can do together," he said.

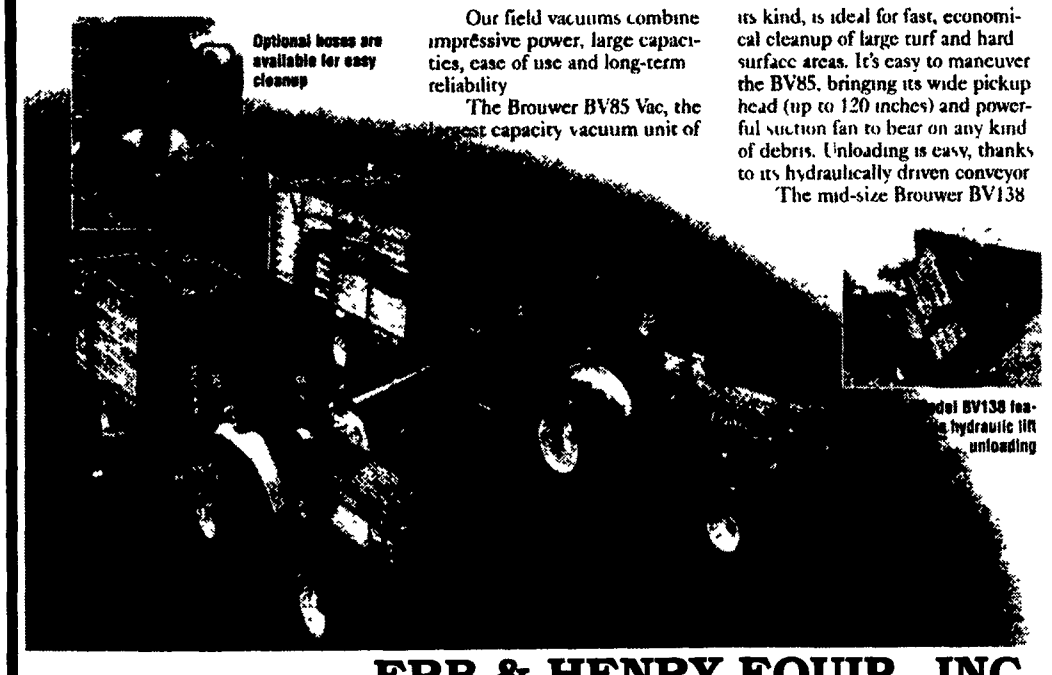
Our vacs have a capacity for hard work.



Our field vacuums combine impressive power, large capacities, ease of use and long-term reliability

The Brouwer BV85 Vac, the largest capacity vacuum unit of its kind, is ideal for fast, economical cleanup of large turf and hard surface areas. It's easy to maneuver the BV85, bringing its wide pickup head (up to 120 inches) and powerful suction fan to bear on any kind of debris. Unloading is easy, thanks to its hydraulically driven conveyor

The mid-size Brouwer BV138 Vac is designed for hard-to-reach areas that require a compact, maneuverable machine. The BV138 features heavy-duty impeller fans, creating a mulching effect on debris before it enters the hopper to significantly increase capacity And, the BV138's hydraulic lift makes unloading simple.

Two great vacs. One great name. For the best in field vacuums, visit your Brouwer dealer today.

ROUND BALERS

Featuring the ALL-NEW variable Open-Throat Power In-Feed System

GREAT BALING STARTS HERE
Variable Open-Throat Power In-Feed System
Here's how it works The incoming crop is pulled off the pickup by the aggressive action of two power in feed rolls – a 6 inch-diameter pivoting power in-feed roll on top and and 8 inch diameter fixed power in-feed roll on the bottom

The top pivoting power in-feed roll rides over the crop as it is pulled into the bale chamber An extension spring keeps the toproll under constant downward force

The spring tension increases as the variable throat opens from a minimum of 3/4 of an inch up to a maximum opening of nearly 7 inches

The constant downward force of the pivoting upper powered in feed roll in combination with the fixed lower in-feed roll both turning inward pniches the crop and forces it into the bale chamber The stripping roll strips crop off the belt and forces it down to the incoming crop Adjustable scrapers on the stripping roll and pivoting roll eliminate buildup

October 13, 2001

Dear Reader,

In the thirty-six years that I have been selling farm tractors, there has been but a few times when a farmer has a GREAT OPPORTUNITY to purchase a like new, pre-owned tractor.

NOW IS ONE OF THOSE TIMES. Here's why:

- Interest Rates are lower than at any time since I have been selling.
- Hoober, Inc. has a great selection of Used Magnums – most with less than 1,000 hours.
- Magnum Tractors have proven their worth over time by providing thousands of owners thousands of hours of trouble-free operation.

So don't wait until the selection is gone. Call your Hoober salesman today or just come on in to get our best deal on a great pre-owned Magnum tractor.

Thanks for the opportunity to serve your farm equipment needs

Yours truly,

Charles B Hoober, Jr
President

In less than a minute you can turn this ingenious tractor into a self-propelled forage harvester, swather, windrower, chopper, even a powerful snowthrower. Seat, steering wheel and the entire instrumentation swings 180° and locks in place. And from this position, you've never had a better view of your work.

NEW! Vermeer 554XL Baler:

UP TO $600 IN CASH AND INCENTIVE BONUSES ON VERMEER BALERS DURING OCTOBER

Cut-Out Clutch Protection
No more burnt or hot discs to wrestle with. Great protection .. for those times when your baler's pulling harder on the outside rows, the tractor's overpowered, or you accidently overfill when trying to bale that last strip of hay.

Here's why:

- 5-bar pickup handles bigger windrows, faster speeds
- Simple, horizontal bale-starting system is designed for fast starts
- Bottom drum design lets you pull in hay faster; often allowing you to drive a full gear faster
- Best HaySaver Wheels in the field.
- Up to 1200 lbs. in a single 65" dia. x 48" wide package; 2000 lb. capacity with silage baler option.
- Silage option lets you bale wet or dry without changing a thing.
- Makes bales 17% larger* than a standard 5' dia. x 4' wide baler at virtually the same price! **

 determined by comparing volume measurement of a standard 60" dia. x 48" wide bale versus a 65" dia. x 48" wide Vermeer bale*
 Price comparison is based on published list prices (Y2000) between Vermeer 554XL Series Baler and other 5 x 4 competitive round baler models*

Stallman Appointed To Federal Agricultural Trade Committee

WASHINGTON, D.C. — American Farm Bureau Federation President Bob Stallman has been appointed to serve on the Agricultural Policy Advisory Committee for Trade (APAC). The announcement was made Sept. 17 by Agriculture Secretary Ann Veneman and U.S. Trade Representative Robert B. Zoellick.

Stallman, a rice and beef producer from Columbus, Texas, and 36 other individuals, including Carl Loop, president of the Florida Farm Bureau Federation and member of AFBF's Executive Committee, were named to APAC to ensure that trade policy and trade negotiation objectives adequately reflect U.S. commercial and economic interests.

The committee provides the secretary of agriculture and the U.S. trade representative information and advice on trade negotiating objectives, bargaining positions, and other matters related to the development, implementation, and administration of U.S. agricultural trade policy.

In making the appointments, Veneman said APAC members will provide "in-depth knowledge and broad experience" as the U.S. embarks on "a very critical period in the trade future of the agriculture and food industry," including negotiations on global trade through the World Trade Organization, the Free Trade of the Americas agreement, and other bilateral undertakings.

In addition to the APAC selections, a number of individuals affiliated with Farm Bureau were appointed to serve on five Agricultural Technical Advisory Committees for Trade (ATACs). ATAC members must have commodity expertise and knowledge of the effects of trade barriers on the areas they represent.

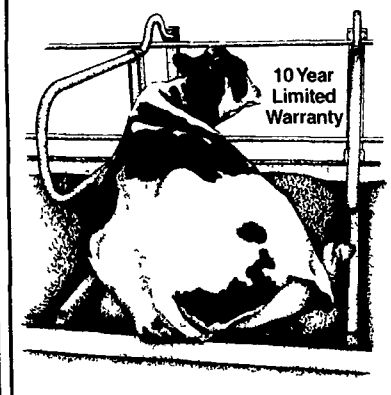
Waterbeds for Cows



ALANTA®
A member of the LimPoly group of companies Patent Pending

The ALANTA Waterbed for cows is a revolutionary product, comfortable, safe and hygienic. It clearly improves your cows' well-being and therefore promotes higher milk production. It is the ultimate stall floor covering for the modern, animal-friendly dairy farm.

WELL MADE
The ALANTA Waterbed is made of two rubber layers with a water-filled compartment in between. GD-Enerka gives a 10-year guarantee.

COMFORTABLE

SAFE
Thanks to the non-slip rubber upper surface, the cow is gripped firmly and cannot slip off. In this way the ALANTA waterbed keeps damage to hooves to a minimum.

Crude Soy Oil Now Available

With the addition of our new soybean processing facility, we now offer soybean oil as an animal nutrition product. Processing the soybeans ourselves allows us to utilize locally grown soybeans and support our local agricultural community!

Crude Soybean Oil

Uses of Crude Soy Oil Include:

- Use as a high energy feed ingredient in swine and poultry diets.
- Especially useful in sow lactation diets, pig starter and grow/finish diets.
- Used as an added energy source in broiler, turkey and layer feeds.
- Can be used for dust control purposes.
- Can be used as a lubricant for feeding systems.

Advantages of Crude Soy Oil:

- Use as a direct replacement for animal fat.
- Vegetable based product.
- Holding tank does not need to be heated if temperature is above 30 degrees, which reduces storage and handling costs compared to animal fat.
- Bulk delivery, partial loads available direct to farm by Keystone Mills.
- Customer may pick up to save delivery costs.

Other Soy Products Available:

- Keystone offers Golden Pro 46 XP which is 46% protein - 6-7% oil, Golden Meal 40 which is 40% crude protein with 18% oil.

Keystone Mills Soybean Exchange Program

- We will take your soybeans in trade for Golden ProXP 46, Golden Meal 40.
- Contact Keystone Mills for details on our soybean exchange program featuring these quality nutritional products.

For Manheim Grower, Difference Is In The Details

MICHELLE KUNJAPPU
Lancaster Farming Staff

MANHEIM (Lancaster Co.) — The key is finding the limiting factor.

When Dwight Rohrer speaks of his approach to successful crop management, the discussion may sound like a bit of a science lesson.

Rohrer's management techniques have helped him win the top corn yield contest in the Pennsylvania shelled corn class in 2000. Additionally he had the highest soybean yields in Pennsylvania in 1996. He has participated in local yield contests since he began farming in 1997.

Most recently, he began entering the statewide contest for the past four years. Prior to that he had entered the local Manheim Young Farmer's yield contest. Rohrer is also planning on entering the upcoming national contest.

"I'm a fairly competitive person," he said. "That's probably why I participate in the field contests. I learn a lot, too." Exchanging information about what worked this season or what other producers are experimenting with provides essential help, said Rohrer.

"I don't enter just to win," he said. "My goal is to be able to evaluate myself against other producers. Contests allow farmers to compare themselves to growers in their area.

"Contests show me where I'm at," he said. "In farm management your goal should be to maintain production in the top 10 percent of the industry, so competition allows me to evaluate that. I also see what I can learn from what other producers are doing," he said.

Crop Management

With 65 acres on his farm, Rohrer finds it necessary to maximize production. "We just try to do the best with what we have," he said.

Since there is no underground or nearby water source available for irrigation, water is his "most limiting factor."

"The general principle in any crop is that the producer needs to find what the limiting factor is and manage that the best they can," he said. "In this area, rainfall is the limiting factor, and I work to make sure that moisture is the only limiting factor of my yield, because that's the only part I can't control." Factors such as seed, fertilizer, and most pests can be managed, explained Rohrer.

"I try to buy good seed, make sure the corn doesn't run out of nutrients, and make sure there is no insect pressure or soil compaction issue to deal with to limit production."

As for advice for other crop growers, "don't worry about rain," he said. "Do the best you can with what you have, and don't worry about the rest."

One technique he uses to maximize moisture is to intentionally deep-till in the fall to create vertical channels for water to filter.

"I've found that erosion is lower in those fields with

Improving Corn Silage Harvest Timing

This is my first Between the Rows since I left last September for a six-month visit to the Miner Institute in northern New York to study corn silage and dairy cows. After going through another silage harvest here with my Miner experience under my belt, I thought a few comments on silage harvesting might be in order.

My hosts at Miner, Ev Thomas and Dr. Charlie Sniffen, continually reinforced to me the idea that to make milk, cows need good and consistent forage quality from both hay crops and corn silage. The Miner staff conducted a survey of active farms a few years back in their area and found that there is a wide range of corn silage quality being fed, dispelling the idea that "silage is silage."

There are many factors that influence silage quality, but perhaps the biggest one is the timing of harvest. Harvesting too late is especially devastating. Late-harvested silage (greater than 40 percent DM) generally has lower fiber digestibility, harder kernels, less sugar, and slightly lower yields than that harvested in the desired moisture range. It also packs less well and is more subject to yeast and molds. All of these factors could result in two pounds less production per cow, translating into a $10,000 loss annually on a 100-cow herd.

Even though we all realize the issues with harvesting

Capitol Region Agronomy Team Report

Effects Of Uneven Corn Emergence
John Rowehl
Capitol Region Agronomy Agent

One of the things I will remember about the 2001 growing season is how dry it was during the planting season and how that resulted in delayed and uneven emergence of corn plants.

It was not unusual for some areas of a field to come up normally because there was sufficient moisture in the soil and the remainder of the field came up several weeks later after we finally got some rain toward the end of May.

I attribute dry soil as the main reason this occurred, but I also think that some factors within the control of the operator contributed to some of this.

If the planter had been set to plant just a little deeper, if opening disks were just a little less worn out, or if planting speed was reduced, corn might have come up just a little more even. I think that we get away with some of these little mistakes in years with more rainfall, and they show up when conditions are more adverse.

We also saw uneven emergence times within a row from one plant to the next. Because of direct competition of plants at two different stages of growth next to one another, uneven stands typically yield less than even stands.

Research was conducted at the universities of Illinois and Wisconsin designed to determine the effect of delayed emergence on corn grain yield. Differing lengths of delays, different patterns and proportions of delayed and normal plants, and two hybrids differing in ear-size flexibility were all evaluated in these field experiments.

Emergence delays of about 10 days scattered throughout the field reduced yield six to nine percent compared to full stands of normal emergence. Emergence delays of about 21 days reduced yield 10 to 22 percent compared to a full stand of normal emergence, depending on the proportion of delayed emergers to normal emergers.

Earlier this year, I was making some observations in one of my test plot fields. I marked some corn plants that were varying in size in a couple of rows.

I thought it would be interesting to return to those same plants and observe for myself how much the larger plants affected the growth of the smaller plants. The plants were at two and four-leaf stages of growth when I marked them.

In the meantime, I had been doing some reading on this topic and found what some extension corn specialists had been commenting about. According to observations made by Bob Nielsen at Purdue, "a growth stage difference of two leaves or greater between adjacent plants will almost always result in the smaller (younger) of the two being barren at the end of the season."

I returned to those marked plants the first week of September to see what had happened.

The corn that emerged late was poorly pollinated and nearly barren. This was typical throughout the field. This was exactly as Purdue's Nielsen had suggested. As a result, many of our fields in the region have a mixture of barren and well-filled ear types that are a result of delayed emergence. This will contribute to variability in the fields for moisture especially where there are large patches of late-emerging plants.

E-85 Market Development
Greg Roth
Department Of Crop And Soil Science

Currently most of the market for ethanol is to use the product in a 10 percent blend in gasoline as an oxygenate or octane enhancer. Another alternative use of ethanol, though, is to use an 85 percent ethanol blend that is called E-85.

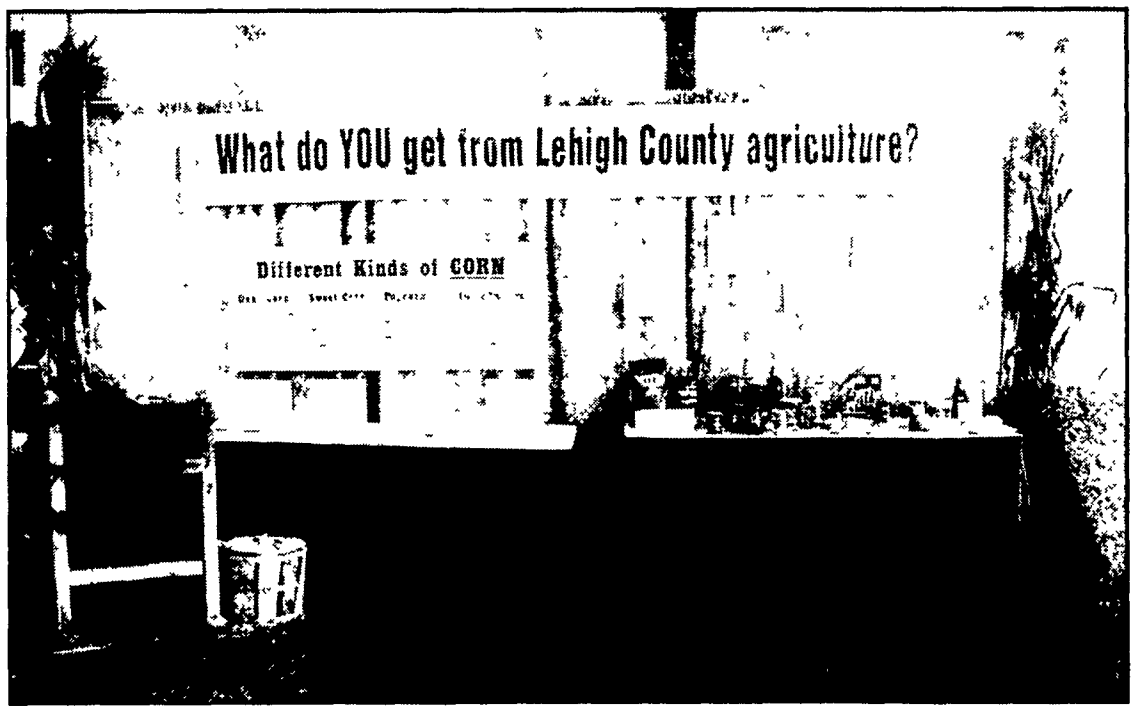
This can be used in many of the new "FFV" flexible fuel vehicles that are being produced now.

Many government vehicle fleets have been mandated to use FFV vehicles. One problem is that there few refueling stations for E-85 in areas such as Pennsylvania.

We learned this summer that the National Ethanol Vehicle Coalition (NEVC) obtained a $100,000 grant from the Pennsylvania Department of Environmental Protection to develop four refueling stations in Pennsylvania. Stations will be located in Dauphin, Lancaster, Philadelphia, and Pittsburgh.

NEVC is interested in developing more E-85 stations around the U.S. and here in Pennsylvania. We recently supported some federal legislation at their request to fund the development of E-85 sites.

We were pleased to learn in a recent letter from Senator Santorum recently that bills have been passed in the House and Senate, earmarking $2 million for E-85 refueling station development nationally.



ALLENTOWN (Lehigh Co.) — The wide range of uses of corn was featured last month at two county fairs. PMCGA and two Penn State extension agents teamed up to develop the displays that featured many of the food and industrial uses of corn. In Fayette County, Extension Agent Don Fretts featured the corn products display at the Fayette County Fair mid-August. In Lehigh County, Extension Agent John Berry helped to develop a display at the Allentown Fair in late August. The Pennsylvania Corn Growers Association supplied a wide range of products from corn that are available in the grocery store. The objectives of the displays was to educate the public about the importance of corn and agriculture in our everyday life.

silage too dry, it still happens quite often — probably too often. We need to work at avoiding late harvesting of silage.

This year, several extension agents and I initiated a corn drydown demonstration at Landisville. We monitored the drydown of three types of corn — early-planted normal, late planted normal, and early planted drought-stressed. You might have seen some of the reports in Lancaster Farming.

We learned several things in the process. The corn was dryer than it looked at times and it dried down about as fast as anticipated. Also as the corn got dryer, the sugar content of the silage declined. These are exactly the reasons to be moisture testing — not guessing on silage moisture.

So one of the first steps at improving our ability to harvest silage on time is to do more moisture testing, both prior to harvest and then during harvest. Moisture testing should start just after all the kernels are dented and a milk line starts to form. Then estimate the time to harvest using a drydown rate of 0.5 to 1.0 percentage units each day. This year, our drydown rate averaged about 0.6 percent per day until the crop reached about 60 percent moisture, then it increased dramatically.

On-farm testing during harvest gives you a clue about whether to speed up the filling process or whether to stop or change fields. On the Miner farm and on several Pennsylvania farms I've visited, it's the responsibility of the guy packing the silo to monitor silage moisture with a Koster tester or a microwave.

Moisture testing should give you a "heads up" on scheduling harvest. With the trend for more custom harvesting, this should help folks get started earlier and work later if necessary or possible.

Difference Is In The Details

deep fall tillage when the rain can be absorbed instead of running off," he said. The channels help to put the water into the ground without losing soil. Leaving plenty of surface residue helps minimize erosion as well.

"Following deep tillage in the fall, in the spring I only lightly harrow the surface right before planting to keep from losing soil moisture," he said.

"Each time you work the ground up you're losing moisture and breaking soil particles. The light harrowing leaves more crop residue that helps maintain soil moisture.

"In essence, it's no-till but deep-tillage in the fall."

The Difference

"The difference is in attention to details," he said. "The big things — everybody does that right. When there is plenty of rain, and I've paid attention to details, I can bring the corn to its full potential."

These details mean ensuring that the planter is set properly, taking his time when he is working the ground, placing fertilizer in the root zone, carefully timing the planting, spraying, and harvesting, and not trying to save money on seed.

"I have to get seed with the most potential to not lose on yield," he said. "Seed is key. If you short-change seed, you're already behind before you started." Rohrer's winning crop was 115-day maturity from Pioneer.

A variety of commercial fertilizers contribute to Rohrer's crop growth. Rohrer uses 200 pounds per acre of 10-20-20 corn starter fertilizer. Preplanting, he applies 200 units of nitrogen. His yield goal is 230 bushels per acre. Rohrer's winning yield in 2000 was 228.3 bushels per acre.

Even though Rohrer has farmed all of his life on the farm he owns now, he continues to experiment. "Last fall I had slit-tilled one-third, deep-chiseled one-third, and used the traditional moldboard plow on one-third of the farm. I want to see for myself which will work best."

Additionally Rohrer does custom corn planting for area producers. The crops are custom-harvested and marketed to local dairy producers.

Rohrer uses Pioneer seed. The variety that won the contest was Pioneer 33P67, a strain that he planted again this year, along with new varieties that may have even higher yield potential.

A Labor Of Love

Growing up on a farm gave him a lifelong interest in agriculture. "You have to farm because you love it. With high risks and few financial rewards, farming is a labor of love," he said.

The Rohrer family has rural roots. In addition to a brother who farms and operates a farm market on the land adjacent to his, Rohrer has another brother farming in Texas and a sister and brother-in-law on a farm in Juniata County.

In addition to farming his own land, Rohrer works full-time for Lancaster DHIA as a milk testing supervisor, taking milk samples and providing production records for 70 herds in the county.

"It works fairly well with farm work," he said. "I leave at 5:15 and get home at 9:30 in the morning, then leave again at 4:30 and get home at 8 p.m., so I have hours in the middle of the day to work here."

Rohrer began farming in 1986 on a rented farm, then purchased his family's home farm in 1989 from his parents. He is the sixth generation of the Rohrer family to own and operate the farm. He is joined by his wife, Rosie, and children Ryan, 11, Tyler, 7, and Kristyn, 5.

His sons are avid soccer players and his wife operates "Rosie's Creative Cakes," an in-home business.

The family raises 50 acres of corn and soybeans along with 10 acres of grapes, a new addition to the farm. This year they will harvest their first crop of grapes. As for future plans, Rohrer is not looking to expand but will direct his energies toward grape production.

He is a member of the Pennsylvania Master Corn Growers Association.

Dwight is also on the leadership team as an elder at East Petersburg Mennonite church. Additionally he is a member of an organization for burn survivors, besides serving as vice-chairman on the board of the Mennonite Financial Federal Credit Union.

Identify Ear Molds

Bob Anderson
Lancaster County
Extension Agent

As we progress through the corn grain, corn growers should be thinking about the possibilities of ear molds. Detection of these molds before harvest is an excellent way to avoid feeding problems later. Knowing that the problem exist before harvest may avoid feeding problems later according to extension livestock feed specialists.

Dr. Gary Munkovold, extension plant pathologist in Iowa, suggests that in checking fields for molds, the grower should husk at least 100 plants scattered throughout the field. He says it is important to check each field separately based on hybrid, tillage and rotation history and planting date because he has found that each of these factors can affect the occurrence of ear molds.

Identifying that a mold exists is only the first step — the mold itself should be identified because their potential impact is different based on the mold found. Munkovold said, "remember, certain ear rots are a warning sign to suspect toxins, but ear rots do not always lead to toxin problems."

Gibberella ear rot is caused by the fungus Gibberella zeae — it can be identified most readily by the red or pink color of the mold. However, in some cases it can appear white. It usually begins at the tip of the ear but can rot the entire ear. Gibberella occurs more commonly when the weather is cool and wet after silking. Gibberella can produce vomitoxin and zearalenone.

Diploidia ear rot appears as a white mold beginning at the base of the ear. The mold and the kernels then turn a grayish brown color and rot the entire ear. A very distinguishing characteristic of Diplodia is the appearance of raised black bumps called pycnidia on the moldy husk or kernels.

Aspergillus ear rot is generally more of a problem for corn in storage. It appears as a gray-green powdery mold. In the field, it is more common on hot dry years. It can grow at temperatures above 90 degrees and with corn moisture as low as 15 percent.

Improving Seed Placement Can Pay Off

ANDY ANDREWS
Editor

LANDISVILLE (Lancaster Co.) — Growers can improve their corn harvest by upward of 7 bushels per acre, which can translate into big bucks, if they simply try to improve the uniformity of their stand.

John Rowehl, Cumberland County agent and a member of the Capitol Region Agronomy Team, reviewed methods of analyzing corn plant uniformity in the field during weather on the stand.

Growers can either tune up the corn planter or slow down the rate of inserting seed into the ground, as one measure.

Researchers out of Purdue and other extension offices looked at ways to quantify or measure the variability of seed spacing. Extension came up with a fairly simple tool, Rowehl noted, called "standard deviation."

Rowehl makes use of Excel Vera Penn State-sponsored Field Crop Pest Management Field Day in July at the Penn State Landisville Research Center.

His research, coupled with findings from extension centers throughout the country, takes a closer look at the variability of corn plants within a row. The variability can be traced to mechanical problems on the planter, planting either too deep or too shallow for germinating conditions, or effects of sion 4 spreadsheet, running on a Windows PC system, which can determine this standard deviation. Using a yardstick, spacing between plants is measured. The standard deviation "shows how far off from a 'perfect stand' you are," Rowehl said. The best is a standard deviation of about 2, he said.

About 17.5 feet of 30-inch row spacing is measured, over about 25 plants. The different spacings are recorded and inputted into the spreadsheet, where calculations can come up with the standard deviation. From there, plant populations can be obtained with a high degree of accuracy.

A grower can obtain "7.5 to 8 bushels per acre more by doing a better job of planting," he said.

Rowehl noted he could provide a template to use on the computer spreadsheet to growers to help them measure the standard deviation in their fields.

Rowehl noted that there was an evident planter problem on a farm in York County that he recently measured. The land was chiseled and disked. The grower used a finger pickup corn planter, with a planting date of late May. The plot had a standard deviation of 4.7, but with one record of 10.6 on row 3, a definite sign of apparent planter difficulties.

Coming up with that savings, by adjusting the planter, could result in a gain of 7 bushels per acre. "What else can you do to gain 7 bushels per acre?" Rowehl said. At $2 per bushel corn, that's $14 per acre, and on 800 acres, that could very well "pay for planter maintenance," Rowehl said.

Growers have to determine their own economic benefits of making adjustments to their planting strategies.

John Rowehl, left, noted he could provide a template to use on the computer spreadsheet to growers to help them measure the standard deviation in their fields. He checks over the data with Gary Dollarhite, Gustafson, at the field day.

The "Got Milk" logo has moved from coffee cups, bumper stickers, and hats to a cornfield in eastern Pennsylvania. Despite this year's drought, corn stands tall enough to provide a challenge for visitors weaving their way across the six acres of cornfield. Other educational exhibits and hay rides provide a chance for schoolchildren and other visitors to learn about farming.

MICHELLE KUNJAPPU

WARRINGTON (Bucks Co.) — Even with the fast pace of farming, an operation can still make time to educate the public. To Winding Brook Farm owner Bill Garges, a corn maze is an ideal vehicle to draw the public to learn about rural America.

The Garges family owns 208 acres and rents additional acreage to farm a total of 900 acres in corn, hay, rye, and wheat. Although they have opened their farm to the public for years, this is the first year for the corn maze.

"We've had the idea for years," he said. "We've been doing hay rides since 1945 and farm tours for 4-5 years."

The Garges family and employees are excited about the new addition to the farm, which complements the activities the farm already offers. They are hoping to bring crowds to the fields. "We sent out 240,00 fliers hoping to get good numbers," he said.

Garges and his wife Rosemary have four children. Their son Bob lives on the property and works full-time on the farm.

According to Garges, the six-acre maze not only helps to educate the public but also improves the farm's economic outlook. "Since milk and grain prices are so low, this helps the bottom line and paying the bills," he said.

Employee Kevin Kinney, Doylestown, has spent much of his summer in the cornfield grooming the area for visitors. The maze features a larger-than-life cow and calf traced into the cornfield and "got milk" slogan.

"We were up in the helicopter this morning, and this looks unbelievable," said Garges.

The correct pathway can be navigated in 15 minutes. However most of the wanderers will take approximately an hour to travel through the three miles of labyrinth — even with the passports that provide clues for participants.

The maze will be open until Nov. 4.

Last year they introduced a hay maze and this year "we had the manpower to do the corn maze," said Garges, so they decided to take on the project.

Manpower, however, is not the only essential ingredient to putting on such a large project as the corn maze.

Educational Opportunity

"We enjoy working with the public," said Garges. "When they come out to the farm people are in a good mood and ready to have fun."

Board Awards Scholarships

EDGEWATER, Md. — The Maryland Grain Producers Utilization Board recently awarded two scholarships in the amount of $2,500 each to Michael R. Harrison of Woodbine, Md. and Jeremiah Weddle of Hagerstown, Md.

Michael Harrison is student at the University of Maryland. He is studying for a degree in agronomy and crop science. He intends to pursue a career studying the effects of different varieties of corn and soybeans and how planting widths and population rates can help to maximize the potential yield of a crop.

"We all felt that Michael was an excellent choice for this scholarship. He has surely demonstrated his love for agriculture through his years working on his family's farm and involving himself in the ag community," said Donnie Tennyson of Dameron, Md., scholarship committee member.

Harrison's family tills more than 670 acres and maintains a 50-head Angus cattle herd in Carroll County. He has actively farmed since he was a small boy and participated in his local 4-H and FFA groups. Harrison continues to volunteer with these youth programs by educating the 4-H'ers and their families about breeding, feeding, fitting, and showing market cattle. He has gained his vast knowledge in this field as a result of his participation with the Maryland Livestock Judging Team, which competed on a national level in Louisville, Ky.

The second award winner, Jeremiah Weddle, has also demonstrated many fine qualities as a student in agriculture at Delaware Valley College studying for a degree in agronomy and animal science. His dream is to go into partnership with his father on their family farm and plans to help the business grow and reach its largest potential. His goal in farming is to earn a good living by crop farming, custom farming, and raising replacement heifers.

Weddle, too, has farmed with his family in Washington County since the time he was a small boy. Tilling more than 1,400 acres of grain and soybeans, Weddle's family also raises 150 Holstein heifers for a large operation in Pennsylvania. Weddle has been an active member of his local 4-H Club, member of the Benevola United Methodist Church, and a junior member of both the Washington County Registered Holstein Club and the Maryland Holstein Club.

Tennyson said, "Jeremiah, too, was a superior choice for this year's scholarships. We had excellent applicants this year, but these two students were truly deserving of these awards. It is great to see how these people (Harrison and Weddle) have excelled in their academic careers and been outstanding citizens in their communities and civic groups."

The Maryland Grain Producers Utilization Board scholarships are awarded to students attending a four-year institution or students in a two-year agriculture program. Selections are based on agricultural background, family farm involvement, financial need, grade point average, agriculture related studies, career goals, and extracurricular activities.

System Assesses Seed Vigor

COLUMBUS, Ohio — A new system that assesses seed vigor may improve the way seed companies evaluate overall seed quality and growth performance.

Ohio State University (OSU) crop production and computer science researchers have developed an automated image-scanning system that is quicker and more accurate than manual tests and improves upon existing commercial automated systems.

Seed companies conduct rigorous stress tests on seed varieties, including cold tests and accelerated aging tests, to determine which varieties have the highest percentage of germination, thus providing farmers and greenhouse growers the best opportunities for a larger yield.

"When you see the percent germination on the back of a seed package that tells you how alive that seed is, the stress tests to obtain that number are usually done by hand," said OSU seed scientist Miller McDonald. "They are not very accurate and it's a time-consuming, laborious process."

The image scanning system combines an inverted flatbed scanner that records digital images of germinating seeds with a computer which then processes the data and gives a quantitative measurement of overall seed vigor. Such a process eliminates the need to conduct stress tests by hand. The system can calculate overall seed vigor within three to four days of germination, as opposed to seven to 14 days if tested by hand.

The researchers believe the system is also an improvement upon existing commercial tests, which only examine certain seedling parts, such as root length or the cotyledon (the part of the seed that produces the plant's first leaves). The new system has the capabilities of measuring all seedling parts, providing more accurate and reproducible seed vigor data.

"We wanted to develop technology that will benefit the seed industry. With this system, seed companies can provide their customers with more accurate germination information, and hence, the highest-quality seed lot," said McDonald.

Added OSU horticulturist Mark Bennett, "Farmers can't afford to have 10 percent of their seeds being dogs, and seed companies want to be known as quality seed providers."

The image-scanning system measures growth of the seed; the roots; and the hypocotyl, or the plant stem located just below the cotyledon. A numeric index of zero to 1,000 (zero indicating poor germination and 1,000 indicating ideal germination) is given to each plant part, and then a final number is given for the seed variety that identifies its overall vigor.

"Seed quality varies — one year it could be high and the next year it could be low. We've had farmers tell us how their old tried-and-true variety they use year after year goes bad. It may say 80 percent germination on the package, but only 30 percent of the crop comes up," said Bennett. "The system provides a good predictor of what will go into the field or greenhouse. For example, long roots uniformly emerging indicate a more vigorous seed lot."

In addition to the system being quicker and more accurate, it is also cost effective. Kikuo Fujimura, a visiting computer science professor who helped develop the software, said a scanner, a computer and the software to analyze the data are the only components needed to make the system work. "We worked on the project using a digital camera, but found that to get the precision you need, you have to spend thousands of dollars on a good digital camera," said Fujimura. "We found that a flatbed scanner can be just as precise, but it only costs about $100."

The prototype developed by the researchers measures seed vigor of lettuce seedlings. The researchers chose this crop for study because it has a very simple root structure. The system is currently being modified to measure seed vigor of soybean and cotton, which have more complex root structures. The system will also be refined to calculate such variables as soil type and weather impact on seed growth.

"Variable seed growth can be a huge cost for growers," said Bennett. "They want to know what seeds can overcome stress, especially when they are wanting to plant as early as possible and they have cool, wet spring weather to contend with."

The researchers have applied for a patent, and several seed companies have expressed interest in testing the system on their products.

WEATHER EFFECTS ON CORN SILAGE

Greg Roth
Penn State
Department Of Crop And Soil Sciences

The variation in our weather from year to year and location to location has a substantial impact on corn silage quality in our region. This variation causes dairy producers and nutritionists to need to adjust rations to maintain high milk production levels.

The table below summarizes some of the effects of weather on yield and several forage quality traits of corn. Most of these data were adapted from a summary by Coors and Lauer (2001) from studies in the Netherlands and New York, but our data from Pennsylvania studies would support them as well.

Higher temperatures can increase DM yield but cause more respiration to occur late in the season and reduce grain fill. High light intensity (lack of cloudy days) promotes good grain fill that has positive effects on whole plant digestibility.

As plant densities increase, yield often increase, but reduced sugars and starch in the silage may lead to slightly lower whole plant digestibility. Delaying harvest tends to reduce dry matter slightly, decrease digestibility, and here in Pennsylvania, often decreases the fiber content and fiber digestibility.

Drought generally reduces yield and grain content. This increases the fiber content but this is often accompanied by lower lignin production that increases the fiber digestibility. In seasons where the drought comes at the end of the season, sometimes the grain content is reduced but the stalks are large and well lignified, so the fiber digestibility is not increased.

Grain Storage Preparation, Maintenance Saves Quality

John Rowehl, CCA
Grain Crops
Cumberland County

Starting out with a bin free of old, insect infested grain is essential to getting a good start, particularly if no other protection will be applied to the grain. Sweeping down the walls of the bin and getting old grain out of the cracks and crevices is essential to prevent problems later.

Tempo 2™ (cyfluthrin) or Reldan™ can be used to apply a surface treatment to the inside of the bin and provide a residual. Malathion is no longer labeled for this use. Chloropicrin is labeled to fumigate underneath false floors and in air ducts.

Once the bin has been properly cleaned, it is important to put clean, insect free new grain in the bin. The first step to accomplish this is to make sure your equipment has been cleaned out before you begin harvesting. Otherwise, you could bring in insects that have been living inside of your combine.

Make sure the combine is adjusted to prevent breakage of grain. Whole grain is more difficult for molds and insects to get started on and also makes aeration of the bin more efficient. If possible, grain should be run through a cleaner before placement in the bin.

Sanitation and surface treatment should be sufficient to control insects for a six to nine month period.

If you are not able to clean out the bin or fumigate under floor areas, or if you think the storage period may be longer, application of a residual insecticide to the grain as it goes into storage will help keep insects controlled. Malathion is no longer labeled for this use. Reldan™ is labeled for this on wheat (as well as barley and oats). If you do not treat the whole bin this way you can treat the last load going in with the Reldan™ or mix in a Bt product into the top four to six inches of grain in the bin to control Indian meal moth.

During summer months, grain should be checked once a month for temperature and moisture that could favor fungus and insect development. The presence of fungus in grain is attractive to insects such as foreign grain beetle and fungus beetle. These insects feed on the mold and not the grain, but their presence can lead to a truckload of grain being rejected.

When insect populations do develop in your bin, in most cases, your only option is to fumigate. Aluminum or magnesium phosphide is label for grain fumigation. You must be a certified applicator to use these products.

Remember, fumigation only kills insects that are present and does not provide long-term residual protection. As soon as the fumigation is complete, insects can begin re-infesting grain.

New PMCGA Officers Elected At Ag Progress

ROCKSPRING (Centre Co.) — At the recent Ag Progress Days board of directors meeting here, the Pennsylvania Master Corn Growers Association (PMCGA) elected three new officers.

Guy Wagner of Bethlehem was elected president, Jeff Werner of Fredricksburg was elected vice president, and Mike Kuhns of Selinsgrove was elected as new secretary-treasurer.

Dan Wolf stepped down after a term of two years as president.

The board is especially grateful to Dan for the excellent job he did providing leadership for the association during his term as president and during his term on the board.

Production Outlook
Greg Roth
Penn State
Department of Crop
And Soil Sciences

The Aug. 11 USDA crop report indicated a state average yield of 108 bushels per acre.

At our Ag Progress Days meeting the general consensus of board members was that in most areas the drought was not a severe as in 1999, but was probably a bit more widespread with more severe conditions in western Pennsylvania.

Some of the board members thought that the yield estimate might decline in future reports because the drought conditions have persisted into mid-late August. Their projections came true as the September crop report indicated a projected yield of 98 bushels per acre — a drop of 10 bushels since the August report.

The 2001 drought continues the odd-numbered year pattern that we have seen in corn production in the state since 1990 as shown in the graph below. Corn production in Pennsylvania this year is estimated to be just under 102 million bushels, down 35 million bushels from last year.

Yields in New York also dropped during August from 105 to 95 bushels per acre. In Maryland, yields are projected to be 138 bushels per acre.

Pocket Guide To Field Corn IPM In Northeast

ITHACA, N.Y. — Integrated Post Management (IPM) is an approach that uses knowledge from many disciplines to enhance profitability, optimize environmental stewardship, and protect human health.

Minimizing reliance on chemical pesticides is one important goal of IPM. The "IPM Field Corn Pocket Guide," brings together in a compact format information needed for successful Integrated Pest Management and Integrated Crop Management (ICM) for field corn growers in the Northeast and their advisers. A collaborative work by experts from across the region, the "IPM Field Corn Pocket Guide," IPM-1 (January 1999, 280 pages), is available from NRAES, the Natural Resource, Agriculture, and Engineering Service, for $7 plus shipping and handling and sales tax.

Some key principles of IPM include management strategies such as crop rotation, site selection, and hybrid selection; identification of pests, environmental stress, nutritional deficiency, or other factors as causes of field problems; sampling or scouting to assess the damage potential of pests; weighing of costs, benefits, and risks of cultural, mechanical, biological, and chemical controls; and implementation of pest control at optimal times in the life cycles of pests and crops.

After an introductory overview, the "IPM Field Corn Pocket Guide," concisely presents information for scouting and managing insect pests, beneficial insects, corn plant diseases, and vertebrate pests, grass weeds, and broadleaf weeds. Also covered are plant and soil health and fertility and postharvest storage. Appendixes include useful formulas, conversions, and comparisons.

Offering guidance on identifying and managing insect, weed, and vertebrate pests as well as nutritional deficiencies, the 280-page publication includes more than 80 line drawings, 18 color plates, and more than 40 tables — all in a handy 3¼-inch by 6-inch format. Five fold-out reference charts provide insect pest action pest action thresholds, management alternatives, and sampling strategies; pictorial keys to grasses and broadleaf weeds; and "Be Your Own Corn Doctor" full-color diagnostic illustrations.

The "IPM Field Corn Pocket Guide" was developed with the help of funding from the Northeast Region Sustainable Agriculture Research and Education Program (SARE), expertise of Cooperative Extension faculty and staff, and contributes from several other institutions. It was produced by staff of the New York State IPM Program, including Karen Edelstein, Carrie Koplinka-Loehr, James VanKirk, and J. Keith Waldron.

CORN TALK NEWS

The interdisciplinary team of contributing authors for the guide included Carl Bannon, formerly of Cornell Cooperative Extension; Gary Bergstrom, Department of Plant Pathology, Cornell University; Jean Conklin, University of New Hampshire Cooperative Extension; Karen Edelstein, New York State IPM Program; Nancy Gift, Department of Soil, Crop, and Atmospheric Science, Cornell University; Frank Himmelstein, University of Connecticut Cooperative Extension; Gordon Johnson, University of Delaware Cooperative Extension; Phil Sutton, formerly of Cornell Cooperative Extension; and J. Keith Waldron, Cornell Cooperative Extension. James VanKirk, Northeast Region IPM, served as principal investigator.

The "IPM Field Corn Pocket Guide" is an expansion and revision of a 1997 book, "Your Pocket Guide to Alfalfa and Field Corn Management," produced for New York State by P. Sutton, C. Koplinka-Loehr, M. Haining Cowles, J. VanKirk, and J.K. Waldron. The "IPM Field Corn Pocket Guide," offers regional coverage as well as substantial additional material on field corn, including diagnostic color plates. New features include pull-out color guides and keys, color disease plates, a practical thumb-index, coverage of vertebrate pest management, a guide to corn development, and expanded sections on corn yield loss and management of dried stored grain.

"IPM Field Corn Pocket Guide," IPM-1, is available for $7 per copy plus shipping and handling, from NRAES, Cooperative Extension, 152 Riley-Robb Hall, Ithaca, NY 14853-5701. Shipping and handling for one copy is $3.75 within the continental U.S. New York State residents add eight percent sales tax (calculated on both the cost of publications and shipping and handling charges.) If ordering more than one book or if ordering from outside the U.S., contact NRAES for shipping rates. Orders from outside the U.S. must be prepaid in U.S. funds. All major credit cards are accepted, and checks should be made payable to NRAES. Here are some corn-based products.

New Corn Uses Sprout From Local USDA Lab

Greg Roth
Department Of Crop And Soil Sciences
Penn State

Recently I had the opportunity to visit the USDA's Eastern Regional Research Center (ERRC) in Wyndmoor, a Philadelphia suburb. I joined several corn producers and about 40 other folks in late August for a very informative tour.

The lab is well known for some of its achievements in the food science arena and is making its mark now in the area of biofuels research, focusing on the development of co-products from corn processing. These new co-products could lead to increased profitability from corn-based ethanol plants and more use of corn for processing which could improve the market situation for corn producers.

Corn co-products are the products that remain after processing of corn. One form of corn processing is called wet milling. In this process, corn is cooked and then separated into the starch, protein, fiber, and oil fractions. The starch is used to make ethanol, corn sweeteners, and food and industrial starch. The protein is sold as corn gluten meal (61 percent protein) and the fiber is sold as part of the corn gluten feed. The corn gluten feed is the least valuable of the co-products and sells for about 5 cents per pound.

At ERRC, researchers found that edible oil could be extracted from the corn fiber. They also found that this new oil was not ordinary corn oil — it contained the highest known naturally occurring levels of phytosterols, which can reduce cholesterol. This new oil from corn fiber has been patented as "Amazing Oil" and the lab is currently looking to commercialize the product.

Another added value use of the corn fiber has been the development of corn fiber gum. Corn fiber gum is similar to gum arabic, a common food additive. This new product is called Zeagen, and efforts are under way to get this to the market place as well.

The lab has also been working on improving the extraction of zein from corn co-products. Zein is used in the food industry to form thin tasteless coatings on foods. The new process under development could reduce the cost of zein to the point where it could be used for numerous industrial applications. Two under consideration are water-resistant coatings on starch-based biodegradable cups and the development of biodegradable zein sheets for mulches in vegetable production.

Another method of corn processing is called the dry grind process. In this process, dry corn is ground and then fermented to a beer, which is distilled to produce ethanol. The basic co-products in this process are distillers grains, used for animal feed, and carbon dioxide, which can be used for soft drink production or other industrial purposes. The dry mill process is the one that is being considered for most ethanol plants under consideration because of its lower costs. The downside is that it produces less co-products than the wet mill process.

At ERRC, several researchers are focusing on improving the efficiency of the dry mill process and also creating more co-products. The lab has developed new milling techniques to separate the oil from the dry ground corn — this allows the dry mill plant to add corn oil to its co-products. They also have found a way to extract fiber from the ground corn, which then allows the development of some of the other fiber-based co-products.

The lab is also evaluating a continuous fermentation process using carbon dioxide to "strip" the ethanol from the beer. This process, combined with the new milling technology, could reduce the cost of ethanol production by 10 cents per gallon.

We also saw a number of other interesting topics on improving the efficiency of ethanol production, including the use of hybrids that are more fermentable and the use of enzymes for pretreatment of the ground grain.

These research projects should eventually lead to more cost effective ethanol production and ultimately more demand for corn. For more information on what's happening at the lab on grain processing and other research, check the lab's Website at www.arserrc.gov.

Maryland Grain Producers Utilization Board Seeks Grant Proposals

EDGEWATER, Md. — The Maryland Grain Producers Utilization Board (MGPUB) is seeking grant proposals for the year 2002. The organization administers the Maryland Grain Checkoff Program that was formed by referendum in 1991.

MGPUB's mission is to increase the profitability of Maryland grain production and to improve the public understanding of agriculture using checkoff investment to support education, promotion, and research.

Funds are spent on each crop in the same ratio as they are collected. This year, MGPUB is seeking proposals for funding with an emphasis on research projects and programs to resolve the Canadian Goose and deer overpopulation; barley research and activities to support a Maryland based ethanol plant; projects to expand the general publics' awareness and appreciation of agriculture, and to provide marketing assistance/advice to grain farmers.

MGPUB will be accepting proposals until Dec. 1 for funding 2002. MGPUB will consider funding part of a large project with another party/parties. Proposals are evaluated and approved at the MGPUB funding meeting in January. For more information and complete MGPUB Research Proposal Guidelines, contact Lynne Hoot at (410) 956-5771 or visit their Website at www.marylandgrain.com.

Applications should be postmarked no later than Dec. 1.

PMCGA, Seed Industry Want Your Membership

STATE COLLEGE (Centre Co.) — Consider joining NCGA and PMCGA today to be part of a national effort to promote corn and corn producer-related issues.

With our Membership Incentive Program (MIP), corn producers who grow five or more acres of corn can join both organizations with little real cost.

The MIP program works like this:

If you sign up for a three-year joint membership for $75, you can receive a free bag of seed from one of our participating industry partners listed on the form. To get signed up, complete your membership form and send it in to our office at the address listed on the form along with a check for $75 made payable to PMCGA to cover the three-year membership.

Our office will then send your name to the seed company you have selected and a coupon to you indicating you have qualified for the program. You will then be contacted by one of the seed company reps and your seed will be delivered before the planting season.

This is a win-win-win proposition — you get a bag of seed and membership in a large national organization for $75, NCGA and PMCGA get your support, and the seed industry gets to showcase new genetics to key producers.

As a member of NCGA, you will be part of a 30,000-member national organization that is addressing many of the issues we face in the industry. Issues include corn prices, industry consolidation, environmental issues, and development of new markets for corn.

NCGA also sponsors the National Corn Yield Contest and Commodity Classic. They also send a quarterly newsletter to all members, entitled the National Corn Grower. PMCGA sponsors one or two conferences a year, the Five-Acre Corn Club, Corn Talk, and helps to promote corn issues to the public at many local events.

If you are a corn producer who grows at least five acres of corn, consider joining for three years today and taking advantage of the MIP program. Use the MIP program to look at some new hybrids that some of our seed company partners have available this year. Remember, membership in the Pennsylvania Master Corn Growers Association (PMCGA) automatically makes you a member in the National Corn Growers Association (NCGA).

Look For Stalk Rot

WOOSTER, Ohio — Severe stalk rot from anthracnose, a corn residue-borne disease, is creating the potential for stalk lodging throughout Ohio cornfields.

Ohio State University plant pathologist Pat Lipps said growers should be scouting their fields for stalk lodging potential and should prioritize which fields to harvest first based upon their evaluations.

"Lodging is one of the more important aspects of stalk rot. A grower can lose more yield to lodging than to the actual effect of the disease on grain production," said Lipps. "Anthracnose is out there. It's extremely critical that growers be aware of the stalk quality issues they are facing."

Lipps said that anywhere between 10 and 50 percent of corn plants evaluated in southern Ohio fields have a stalk rot problem. "It looks like they are ready to lodge at any given moment," said Lipps. Stalk rot problems are beginning to show up in the northern and western parts of the state, as well.

Stalk rot is one phase of the fungal disease anthracnose. The leaf blight phase develops early in the season and is brought on by wet weather conditions. Lipps said that because of wet weather early in the growing season, anthraconose is much more common than usual.

"Stalk rot seems to be more widespread throughout the state. Growers in the southern part of Ohio are seeing stalk rot now.

Growers in the north will start seeing it soon." said Lipps.

Lipps said stalk rot will become more prevalent throughout Ohio cornfields as the plants continue to mature, but emphasizes that stalk lodging is highly dependent on field situations. Some corn hybrids have resistance to anthracnose or can limit the amount of stalk lodging.

NCGA, ASA Announce Louise Mandrell To Entertain At Commodity Classic

ST. LOUIS, Mo. — Every year, quality entertainment is a key feature of the Commodity Classic, the combined convention and trade show of the National Corn Growers Association (NCGA) and the American Soybean Association (ASA) — and 2002 will be no exception.

Nashville recording star Louise Mandrell will headline the evening of entertainment at the 2002 Commodity Classic Feb. 23 in Nashville. Commodity Classic will run Feb. 21-23.

Mandrell's talent, personality, and boundless energy have won her a legion of fans, unparalleled reviews, hit records, a best-selling book, numerous commercial endorsements, her own nationally syndicated television special, and a spectacular stage show.

The namesake of the Louise Mandrell Theater, which opened in 1997 in Pigeon Forge, Tenn., Mandrell leaped into the national spotlight in the fall of 1980 as one of the talented siblings on the NBC television show, "Barbara Mandrell and the Mandrell Sisters."

Louise's ability to relate to and reach her audience is one of her greatest attributes. When Louise walks on a stage, she literally owns it. She combines bluegrass traditions with pure country harmonies, while she incorporates Broadway-perfect dance steps with an unsurpassed fluency on several musical instruments for one of the most energetic and entertaining shows anywhere. She has dazzled and electrified audiences from the main showrooms of Las Vegas, to the heartlands of the Bible Belt.

Get ready for some down home cowboy-style music when Louise Mandrell's opening act, Grammy Award-winning Riders in the Sky, take the stage. For 23 years, Riders in the Sky have been making music the cowboy way — that is, creating harmony-laden music that paints a vivid portrait of the characters and culture of the West. Their readily identifiable style was a perfect fit for Disney's "Toy Story 2." Riders in the Sky members Ranger Doug, Too Slim, Woody Paula and recently added sidekick, Joey the Cowpolka King, are known for keeping the tradition of the singing cowboy alive.

Every year, Commodity Classic draws the nation's top corn and soybean producers for three days of educational sessions and seminars as well as a huge trade show featuring the latest in equipment, products and technology.

More information about Commodity Classic is available at www.commodityclassic.com. Registration materials will be mailed to all NCGA and ASA members and will be posted on the Website in mid-October

Scout Fields For Stalk Rot Before Harvest

Erick De Wolf
Department Of Plant Pathology
Penn State

Over the last weeks I had the opportunity to visit corn fields in the central and southeast regions of the state. During those visits I have observed some fields with fairly high incidence of anthracnose stalk and leaf blight.

Some hybrids also had a high incidence of top dieback that can also be attributed to systemic infection by the anthracnose fungus, Colletotrichum graminicola. It is also possible that other stalk rot diseases are also present at high levels in some areas.

With the silage harvest is full swing and grain harvest fast approaching, it is essential to evaluate fields now for lodging potential now. Fields with a history of disease, or fields showing a high incidence of leaf diseases (such as gray leaf spot), should be scouted first.

Now that said I believe it is important to remind you that the relationship between stalk rot diseases, environment, and hybrid are very complex, and you should not make any assumptions based on field history or level of leaf disease. You will need to go out and check the fields.

An effective way to assess a field for lodging potential because of stalk rot is to squeeze the stalks in several spots moving down the stalk from the ear. You will need to check multiple (three to four) sections in a given field in groups of 30 to 40 in each section. Stalks with stalk rot disease are easily compressed between the forefinger and thumb.

The presence of stalk rot can be confirmed by splitting some of the stalks and checking for pith discoloration or degradation. Anthracnose stalk rot can be identified by a shiny black color (fungal fruiting bodies) on the outer stalk, and a brown discoloration of pith. The fusarium stalks rots often are associated with a pink pith discoloration.

The bottom line here is fields found to have stalk rot problems are at risk for lodging, and these fields should be harvested first to avoid harvest complications.

Education, Corn Maze

Winding Brook Farm will also gives birthday party, pumpkin, and daytime and evening hay rides. Last year the family bought a school tour business which adds to the farm's potential to educate students and teachers alike about agriculture.

The recent addition of a fake cow has also expanded the farm's ability to reach the public with information about agriculture. The cow, equipped with a tape recorder, "talks" to students and adults who can try their hand at milking. The model will be displayed in a barn with seats, and tour guides will explain cattle and dairying to students.

The elementary education campaign launched by the farm also includes ag-in-the-classroom lesson plans and activity sheets for teachers and on-site educational displays. Questions on a passport quiz students on a variety of subjects. Students with correct answers receive clues to guide them toward the exit.

A Growing Business

The family contacted the "MAiZE," company based in Utah, to plan and assemble the maze.

According to InterNet information, the business began when Brett Herbst, a Salmon, Idaho native and Brigham Young University agribusiness graduate, launched his first corn maze in 1996. Herbst had previously read about a similar maze in a farming magazine.

Brett's original labyrinth in American Fork, Utah was the largest corn maze created in the western United States and was the beginning of his business, "The MAiZE."

The MAiZE has become the world's largest corn maze company. Herbst had originally seen the business as a sideline hobby; however, maze popularity and demand is now a full-time occupation for the Herbst family. Herbst has designed 206 mazes worldwide.

NCGA Tells California Governor That Study Establishes Ethanol's Viability As MTBE Replacement

WASHINGTON, D.C — A study commissioned by the National Corn Growers Association (NCGA) has concluded that refiners in California are on schedule to replace the state's supply of MTBE with ethanol, and that the state's motorists will have adequate supplies of ethanol-blended gasoline when MTBE is banned Jan 1, 2003.

In recent months, corn growers and other ethanol supporters have repeatedly responded to opponents' inflammatory remarks that distorted the truth on issues such as how ethanol will affect gas prices and the adequacy of ethanol supplies. This study, based on plans submitted by California refiners in compliance with California Environmental Quality Act (CEQA), refutes them all.

In a letter to California Gov. Gray Davis, NCGA President Lee Klein, a farmer from Battle Creek, Neb., pointed out that "the investments necessary to accommodate ethanol in California have largely been made and that there will be no significant infrastructure costs associated with using ethanol."

NCGA's CEQA study concludes that refiners will need 675 million gallons of ethanol annually to fulfill the oxygen requirement for California's gasoline. That's the amount of ethanol produced from 270 million bushels of corn. The study also finds that sufficient quantities of ethanol exist in Midwest markets to supply the needs of California in 2003.

"Certain state officials in California have made outrageous statements that are completely without factual substance," said NCGA Consultant Dr. Michael Graboski, a co-author of the study and a faculty member at the Colorado School of Mines. "For example, the issue of shortage caused by the use of ethanol is totally unsubstantiated. Refiners who serve southern California have already filed environmental impact plans that describe refinery and terminal modifications needed to comply with the law banning MTBE by the first day of 2003. All plans indicate that modifications will be completed before the phase out deadline," which means that ethanol-containing gas will be available in the market by the time MTBE is removed from all gasoline.

Graboski concluded: "The NCGA study shows the California refining industry has had enough time to plan to remove MTBE and appears to have acted responsibly to eliminate its presence and replace it in an orderly fashion with ethanol in the state's gasoline.

Keys To Harvesting Quality Corn Silage

David Messersmith
Crops And Soils Agent
Wayne and Susquehanna County

It's that time of the year again and, believe it or not, nothing affects the quality of your corn silage more than what you do at harvest.

Forget about varieties, plant populations, and weed control (for now anyway), and concentrate on how you can achieve optimum silage quality.

The biggest factor that affects silage quality is the moisture content at the time of harvest (65-70 percent for trench silos, 63-68 percent for conventional uprights, and 55-60 percent for limited oxygen silos). Corn that is ensiled too wet will ferment poorly and loose nutrients by seepage. Silage that is too dry will result in air pockets that prevent anaerobic fermentation and allow development of molds.

Dry, overmature corn silage is also less digestible and contains lower amounts of vitamins A and E than corn ensiled at the proper maturity.

Silage moisture content should be monitored by a moisture tester or a microwave oven. (Contact the extension office for information on determining forage moisture using a microwave oven). Moisture content can be roughly estimated by the position of the kernel milk line. The kernel milk line appears as a whitish line separating the kernel starch and milk.

This appears at early dent and moves down the kernel as the grain matures. Silage moisture contents at full dent, half milk, and black layer stages average 68, 61, and 53 percent, respectively. Keep in mind that these are estimates and may be off by four percentage points. Dry matter yields and digestibility are at their highest when the crop is at ⅓ milk line.

Since whole-plant corn silage is typically well preserved, preservatives and inoculants do not need to be used routinely. They can be beneficial, however, when the crop is ensiled at moisture levels under 63 percent and over 70 percent.

Estimating Corn Silage Yields

There are several ways to measure corn silage yields. The best way is to weigh your silage wagons as you harvest. This works great if you have a scale but it's pretty hard to do if you don't. Another way is to hand harvest small plots within each field. Counting wagon loads or silo rings is a very distant third and fourth.

How To: Hand Harvest Silage Checks

1. Measure 17 foot five inches of a row (assuming you have a 30 inch row spacing). Count the number of stalks within that distance (this number is your final plant population by the way). Divide this number by two then harvest that many stalks. For example: if the number of stalks in 17 foot, five inches is 26 (26,000 plants per acre), you would harvest half of them, or 13 stalks.

2. Weigh the stalks that you harvested with a milk scale. The weight of the stalks in pounds equals the pounds of silage per acre (17 pounds would equal 17 tons per acre).

3. Estimate silage moisture by looking at the kernel development. Early dent 68 percent, half milk line 61 percent, and black layer 53 percent.

4. Repeat the process at three to five locations within the field and average the results.

How To: Early Corn Grain Yield Estimates

Grain yields can be roughly estimated as soon as pollination takes place. The key word here is roughly since the method below will be within about 20 bushels per acre of the actual yield. Sometimes even a rough estimate can be valuable for planning purposes though.

PENNSYLVANIA MASTER CORN GROWERS ASSOC., INC

Step 1. Count the number of harvestable ears in a length of row equivalent to 1/1000th acre. For 30-inch rows, this would be 17 foot, 5 inches.

Step 2. On every fifth ear, count the number of kernel rows per ear and determine the average.

Step 3. On each of these ears count the number of kernels per row and determine the average. (Do not count kernels on either the butt or tip of the ear that are less than half the size of normal size kernels.)

Step 4. Yield (bushels per acre) equals (ear number) times (average row number) times (average kernel number) divided by 90.

Step 5. Repeat the procedure for at least four additional sites across the field.

Example: You are evaluating a field with 30-inch rows. You counted 24 ears (per 17 foot, 5 inches equals row section). Sampling every fifth ear resulted in an average row number of 16 and an average number of kernels per row of 30. The estimated yield for that site in the field would be (24 times 16 times 30) divided by 90, which equals 128 bushels per acre.

Is It Wise To Use Starter Fertilizer For Corn?

NORCROSS, Ga. — Is starter fertilization a good fit for you? This practice has been around for many years, and has been adopted in many areas of the Corn Belt.

But there are still plenty of farmers who have decided that it's not worth the trouble.

Rigging a planter and stopping to fill up with fertilizer just doesn't seem like a good idea. So is starter fertilization worth it? Let's look at the issues.

"I've got too many acres to plant to mess with starter." This statement reflects the trend toward larger farms. In the spring, farmers are concerned primarily with the logistics of getting all of their acres covered as quickly as possible. Research has shown that delayed planting can lead to yield losses. Spring carries a high probability of rainy, cool weather. So when the window of opportunity opens, the last thing any farmer wants is an increased risk of not getting the seed in the ground.

But there's another risk that many forget. Cool, wet conditions increase the risk that nutrient supply to the plant will be limited. In such environmental conditions, slowdowns occur in nutrient absorption by the roots, carbohydrate translocation to the roots, and nutrient transport to the roots. All of these slowdowns increase the risk of reductions in yield potential. So cool, wet conditions increase the farmer's desire to plant quickly, but also increase the chance that starter will provide benefits.

"Starters can make the corn look better early, but they normally don't translate to yield." The application of starter fertilizer can hasten the maturity of the corn crop. This is often demonstrated by increased plant height and greater generation of biomass early in the season. But growth and development differences early in the season may not result in economic responses.

So what conditions increase the chances that starter fertilization will actually be advantageous? There are two primary benefits that have been identified: increased yield and decreased grain moisture. Lower grain moisture may be especially important this year to save on drying costs during high natural gas prices. The probability of seeing such benefits increases whenever the plant's demand for nutrients becomes greater than the root system's ability to supply them, such as 1) cold, wet soils, 2) reduced tillage systems, 3) compacted soils, 4) soils low in nutrients, 5) areas with detrimental herbicide carryover, 6) high soil salinity, and 7) high soil acidity. Under such conditions, observed early growth has greater chances of providing end of season yield and moisture benefits.

"Corn planted later won't benefit from starters." Many believe that once soils warm and become drier that starters won't provide much benefit. However, in northern areas of the Corn Belt, the growing season is short enough that hastened maturity from starters becomes an important issue. Research from Wisconsin has shown that both planting date and the relative maturity of the hybrid are important factors. The probability of getting both yield and moisture benefits from starter fertilization increases steadily for longer season hybrids planted later. Late planting increases the risk that the season will be too short and cut into yield potential. This risk increases for longer season hybrids. Applying starter reduces these risks when longer season hybrids are planted later.

Starter fertilization is an important management option. Understanding your cropping system, soils, environmental conditions, and soil fertility are important for making the right decision. It is important that in the rush to get corn planted we not dismiss too readily the potential benefits of starter fertilization.

NGSP Seeks Contestants For National Sorghum Yield, Management Contest

LUBBOCK, Texas — The 2001 National Grain Sorghum Yield and Management Contest is under way, and farmers who are 30 or more days from harvest still have time to enter the contest, said Kenneth Rose, National Grain Sorghum Producers (NGSP) Yield and Management Contest chairman and producer from Keyes, Okla.

Sorghum growers from across the U.S. compete each year to determine how their sorghum yields stack up on the county, state, and national levels. Winners of the contest, which includes five divisions, are determined by the amount a contestant's yield exceeds the five-year average yield in that contestant's county as determined by USDA's National Agricultural Statistics Service.

The contestant's score is the difference between their yield and the county five-year average. Winners are determined by high scores in each division. The contest's five divisions are non-irrigated conventional tillage, irrigated conventional tillage, non-irrigated no-till, non-irrigated mulch-till, and irrigated reduced-till. Based on scores, state and national winners are named in first, second and third places in each division.

Producers may enter as many contest plots as they wish. A $35 non-refundable entry fee must accompany each entry/contest plot. Contestants must be members of NGSP; however, dues may accompany the entry.

Producers who are interested in entering may contact NGSP at (806) 749-3478 or ngsp@sorghumgrowers.com. Entry forms also are available at NGSP's Website, www.sorghumgrowers.com.

USDA Releases Grain Transportation Outlook

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The USDA recently reported its assessment of the grain transportation situation in the U.S. and prospects for the next few months.

USDA provides this information to help producers, shippers, receivers, railroads, and other transportation providers prepare for changes that occur in agricultural transportation needs and service levels throughout the year.

Projections for U.S. grain and soybean production are down 5 percent from the 2000-2001 marketing year. Total use is projected up slightly from last year. Exports have increased by 91 million bushels, up 2.14 percent from last year. Ending stocks are down 22 percent from a year ago.

Grain and soybeans stored in all positions on June 1 are up 2 percent from a year ago. On-farm stocks are up 6 percent from last year.

Ocean freight rates decreased at the beginning of the third quarter. The Baltic Exchange, as of Aug. 9, 2001, reported the daily average rates for the Gulf to Japan and Pacific Northwest (PNW) to Japan to be $17.78 per metric ton and $10.39 per metric ton, respectively. Both of these rates were at their lowest since July 1999 (for the Gulf) and September 1999 (for the PNW), which was before the recent increase in fuel prices. Ocean rates peaked at different times for the two key grain routes. For the U.S. Gulf to Japan, the average ocean freight rates reached a high of $24.04 per metric ton in mid-May; the rate from the PNW peaked at $17.68 per metric ton in mid-March. Since then, the average ocean freight rates for both routes have been falling.

Barge grain movements for July-August were 1.1 million tons per week, a 21-percent increase over the 5-year average for the third quarter. Although barge traffic on the Mississippi River slowed at Locks and Dam 15, grain movements increased at locks below that point. L&D 27, the last lock on the Mississippi, reported several weeks of over 1 million tons moving weekly during June into August.

USDA projections for U.S. corn exports increased because of increased global demand.

U Of I: Corn Zein Plastics Offer Many Applications

URBANA, Ill. — Livestock producers may soon benefit from using edible and biodegradable plastic-like sheets to cover and protect hay bales in the field from moisture and mold.

Hay coverings are one application of University of Illinois (U of I) research-produced films made from corn zein, a corn protein that is typically neglected in processing, according to Graciela Padua, U of I assistant professor of food engineering.

"The common practice is to wrap hay bales in polyethylene wrapping, which is labor-intensive to use because it must be removed and it often shreds in the process," Padua said. "It is not healthy for the cows to eat any part of the shredded plastic."

Padua has created a flexible, biodegradable corn zein film that has plastic qualities and is highly water-resistant. The films could potentially keep the hay dry in the fields through the wet season.

Corn zein has been used by the pharmaceutical industry as specialty coatings for various products. Padua is investigating other applications to use the value-added plastics, which are safe for contact with food and animal feed.

"Zein behaves as a plastic in many respects, but is safe for the environment. It is even edible for livestock and wildlife," Padua said. "It is flexible, water- and heat-resistant, and is strong enough for the forming process."

Padua has been successful in developing a process to extrude zein resins into resin pellets. The pellets could be sold from the corn millers directly to plastics manufacturers, and used in the same way that plastic pellets are processed.

"The material will look and behave the same as synthetic pellets, so manufacturers would not have to change the product development process," Padua said. "Our goal was to develop off-the-shelf technology that could be used quickly and easily."

The research innovations could be used for biodegradable agricultural mulching films and packaging of fresh foods. Another application might be fast-food wrappers and trays that could be composted rather than sent to the landfills, thus saving space and providing fertilizer, Padua said.

Using Simulations To Answer Cropping Questions On Dairy Farms

Greg Roth
Department Of Crop
And Soil Sciences
Penn State

Making cropping system recommendations on dairy operations is complex. Many agronomic decisions can impact feed production, feed quality, nutrient management, milk production, and profitability.

On top of that our variability in weather from year to year makes assessing the best option difficult over the long term. Using a computer simulation of a dairy farm might be one alternative to approaching these problems.

During the last year I have worked with Dr. Al Rotz at the Pasture Systems and Watershed Research lab and some of our colleagues to use Al's dairy farm simulation model called DAFOSYM (http://pswmru.arsup.psu.edu/dafosym.htm) to address several crop production issues on dairy farms. I have been reasonably impressed with the results.

Basically, the model simulates the performance of a dairy farm under several management alternatives. The user enters all of the characteristics of the farm-soils, cows, crops, and equipment. The program then simulates the growth of the crops, the timeliness of harvest, the forage quality of the forages, balances the ration, and then estimates milk production, nutrient losses, and the economic performance of the farm. It does this during a 30-year period using long-term weather data. You can then adjust some of the predicted results to match records of actual farm performance.

In the first part of this effort, we found the corn and soybean yield models seemed to predict actual yields fairly well. The model gives you a prediction of all crop yields for the last 30 years.

We conducted several simulation projects during the last year. In our first trial, we looked at the economics of adding soybeans to a corn/alfalfa rotation in Centre or Franklin counties.

We found that soybeans are a profitable addition on farms that have excess land available for grain production and low corn prices. They weren't profitable when you needed all the corn for silage. The model also suggested that soybeans were more valuable when sold as a cash crop rather than fed on the farm. Soybeans had little impact on environmental benefits.

We have done other simulations with adding additional acres, adding cover crops, and substituting small grains for corn. As with all models, the results must be evaluated carefully but it does allow you to test possible scenarios without doing extensive field research.

I'm excited about working with the model more because its difficult to do cropping system studies when you have to measure actual yields. Often actual yields vary considerably from year to year and field to field, and then you need lots of years or locations to say anything meaningful.

Eventually, we should also be able to do simulations of different grain crop rotations for grain producers. That should be interesting as well.

Area Grower State Winner In National Corn Yield Contest

PENNSYLVANIA MASTER CORN GROWERS ASSOC., INC.

ST. LOUIS, Mo. — An area corn grower has been named a state winner in the 2000 National Corn Yield Contest (NCYC), sponsored by the National Corn Growers Association (NCGA).

James Hershey of Elizabethtown, Pa., placed third in the state in the A No Till/ Strip Till Non-Irrigated Class with a yield of 216.4114 bushels per acre. The hybrid planted in the winning field was Pioneer 33A14.

The local grower was one of 507 state winners from among 3,552 entrants nationwide. The state winners used 159 different hybrids to produce an average yield of 207.5 bushels per acre, up 1.1 bushels from last year's winning yield average. Even the non-winners fared well — only 5.2 bushels separated the average winning yield from the average of all entrants (202.3 b.p.a.). The high yield was 357.3 bushels per acre, produced by a grower in Manchester, Iowa, who topped the popular contest for the second year in a row.

Weather once again played a significant role in yields that ranged from the winning 357.3 bushels to the lowest national yield of 216.7 bushels per acre.

"It's interesting that the majority of the winners were east of Mississippi River," said NCGA President Lee Klein of Battle Creek, Neb. "Growers in eastern states who endured devastating droughts in previous years finally enjoyed better-than-ideal growing conditions in 2000.

"Hot and dry conditions pulled yields down in Nebraska and Kansas while a preharvest storm in the central Corn Belt damaged crops in key corn growing states such as Iowa and Illinois," Klein said.

The top national yields ranged from 226.1 bushels per acre in the A Ridge-Till Non-Irrigated Class to 357.3 bushels per acre in the AA Non-Irrigated Class. Average yields, by class, ranged from 169.5 bushels in the A Ridge-Till Non-Irrigated Class to 214.7 bushels per acre in the Irrigated Class.

The goal of the National Corn Yield Contest is to provide farmers with information that can help improve their methods of production to increase profitability, while addressing environmental concerns. Contest participants also improve their operations by getting a unique opportunity to compare their own proven corn production capabilities with other farmers in their state and across the country.

Farmers are encouraged through the contest to develop new, efficient production techniques. Fertilizer is one example of the improved efficiency being reflected in the contest. The average commercial nitrogen use per bushel of yield was 0.98 pounds for all entrants, significantly less than the agronomic requirement of 1.1 to 1.2 pounds per bushel.

Other agronomic data gleaned from the 2000 contest include:

- Contest entrants planted 548 different hybrids.
- 67.6 percent of the contest fields followed soybeans; 17.7 percent followed corn.
- 70.9 percent of entrants ran a soil test on their entry field before planting.
- Average planted population per acre was 30,895 for entrants; 30,928 for winners.

Contest winners were recognized Feb. 26 at the 2001 Commodity Classic, the combined convention and trade show of the NCGA and the American Soybean Association (ASA), held in San Antonio, Texas. A complete list of winners is posted on the NCGA Website at www.ncga.com.

Silage, Corn Testing Program Available

WESTMINSTER, Md. — The Maryland Department of Agriculture is taking steps to assist livestock farmers suffering from extended dry conditions with a free forage and corn testing program. High levels of nitrates can occur in drought-stressed forage, and aflatoxin, a mold that affects drought-stressed corn, can cause illness or even death in animals.

"Farmers in Maryland's north central tier counties have experienced severely dry conditions this summer," said Maryland Secretary of Agriculture Hagner R. Mister. "In order to protect their livestock from the potentially fatal effects of aflatoxin, we will do the testing and notify farmers of the results as quickly as possible so they will know whether it is safe to use their corn and forage for livestock feed."

It is important for livestock farmers to know the nitrate levels in forage crops so they can plan how to make and use the forage that would be produced from those crops. The lack of rain can cause the forage to have higher levels of nitrates than normal, adversely affecting livestock.

Aflatoxin is a mold of corn that often occurs when corn is grown in drought conditions. Animals fed rations made from aflatoxin-infested corn can become ill and die.

The Maryland Department of Agriculture's State Chemist Section will perform both the nitrate tests on silage and the aflatoxin tests on corn for grain.

Farmers needing information about how to collect the test samples or to receive a sample identification/ information sheet for the 2001 Forage Nitrate Test, call the Carroll County Extension Office at (410) 386-2760.
